

SIDNEY WISE

Award Recipients

American Council of Learned Societies

The American Council of Learned Societies, located at 228 East 45th Street, New York, NY, 10017-3398, is a private, nonprofit federation of 46 national scholarly associations devoted to the advancement of humanistic studies in all fields of learning. In recent competitions, the following political scientists won fellowships or grants.

Fellowships for Postdoctoral Research in Humanities and Social Sciences

Alan Gilbert, associate professor of political science, University of Denver. Autonomy and democratic institutions.

Helen M. Silverberg, assistant professor of politics, Princeton University. State, party, and the reorganization of literacy in the French Middle Ages.

Grants-in-Aid for Postdoctoral Research in Humanities and Social Sciences

Jane Jenson, professor of political science, Carleton University. Gendering effects: the politics of the women's movement and state policies in France.

Melvin Richter, professor of political science, City University of New York, Graduate Center. Tocqueville, the Two Napoleons, and Bonapartism.

Postdoctoral Fellowships in Chinese Studies

Richard C. Kraus, associate professor of political science, University of Oregon. Brushes with power: modern politics and the Chinese art of calligraphy.

Fellowships for Graduate Students in Chinese Studies

Louise Coan, department of political science, University of Michigan.

Support for Dissertations Relevant to Eastern Europe

David L. Bartlett, political science, University of California, San Diego. The political economy of financial reform in Hungary.

Jeffrey S. Kopstein, political science, University of California, Berkeley. Communism and legality.

Annamaria Seleny, political science, Massachusetts Institute of Technology. The Hungarian second economy and its political significance.

Fellowships for Advanced Graduate Study and Training in Eastern European Studies

Andzrej W. Tymowski, political science, Yale University. A comparison of opposition movements within Poland, Czechoslovakia and the German Democratic Republic.

Center for Latin American Studies

The University of Pittsburgh's Center for Latin American Studies has selected five political scientists in its Research Grants on Current Latin American Issues 1989 competition.

The winners of the 1989 competition are:

Susan C. Bourque, professor of government, Smith College, and Director of Smith Research Project on Women and Social Change, for "Education, Development, and Gender: The Politics of Cultural Change."

Henry A. Dietz, associate professor of government, University of Texas-Austin, for "The Effect of Economic Crises on Issue-Oriented and Party Identification Models of Voting: The Urban Poor in Lima, Peru, 1980-1990."

Ben Schneider, assistant professor of politics, Princeton University, for "Elite Bureaucrats and the Politicized State in Postwar Brazil."

Rose J. Spalding, associate professor of political science, DePaul University, for "Private Sector-State Relations in Revolutionary Nicaragua."

Arturo Valenzuela, professor of government, Georgetown University, for "The Legacy of Authoritarianism: Party Politics, Partisan Attachments and the Transition to Democracy in Chile."

Center for U.S.-Mexican Studies

The Center for U.S.-Mexican Studies at the University of California, San Diego, announces that the following political scientists have been awarded Visiting Research Fellowships for the 1989-90 academic year.

Miguel Angel Centeno, Ph.D. candidate, Yale University, to complete his dissertation on "the New Científicos?—Public Policy and Political Elites in Mexico."

Joe W. Foweraker, University of Essex, England, for research on "Linkages Between Popular Movements and Institutional Change in Mexican Politics."

Juan Molinar Horcasitas, Universidad Nacional Autónoma de México; Ph.D. candidate, UC-San Diego, for graduate study and research on "Mexican Electoral Behavior in Comparative Perspective."

Arturo Sanchez Gutierrez, Universidad Autónoma Metropolitana, Azcapotzalco, and Ph.D. candidate, Oxford University, to complete his dissertation on "Development of the Mexican Political System During the 1950s."

In addition, the following political scientists will be Guest Scholars in residence in the Center for U.S.-Mexican Studies in 1989-90:

Sophie Body-Gendrot, Université Blaise Pascal, Paris; research on "Impacts of Immigration on Inter-ethnic Relations."

Miriam L. Campanella, University of Torino, Italy; research on "Political Decision-making in Subcontinental Economic Regions."

Luiz Orenstein, Ph.D. candidate, Instituto Universitário de Pesquisas do Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, to complete his dissertation on "Macroeconomic Policies and Political Networks."

Since 1980 the Center has hosted 173 predoctoral and postdoctoral scholars and non-academic professionals from 15 different countries. Thirteen nationalities are represented among the 23 visiting scholars who will be in residence in the Center in 1989-90.

Gerald R. Ford Foundation

The following political scientists, listed with their affiliations and topics, were awarded grants in spring 1989 by the Gerald R. Ford Foundation.

John H. Cable, doctoral candidate, Oxford University, on "The Rise and Fall of Economic Detente: An Assessment of American Economic Diplomacy Towards the Soviet Union, 1969-76" and "The Development of American Economic Policy Towards the U.S. and the People's Republic of China, 1969-76: A Comparative Study in Political Economy."

George T. Felkenes, professor, The Claremont Graduate School, on "Crime Control and Criminal Justice: The Legacy of Gerald R. Ford."

Bruce Allen Murphy, professor, Pennsylvania State University, on "Justice Under Siege: William O. Douglas and the Gerald Ford Impeachment Effort."

Mark J. Rozell, assistant professor, Mary Washington College, on "The Press and the Ford Presidency."

James A. Stever, professor, University of Cincinnati, on "Presidential Management of Intergovernmental Relations."

Charlotte W. Newcombe Fellowships

Charlotte W. Newcombe Fellowships for 1989 have been awarded to 40 outstanding graduate students in their last year of doctoral work. Newcombe Fellows receive a stipend of $10,000 plus contributions toward medical insurance. The fellowships support dissertations concerning ethical or religious values as they relate to important social, historical, or literary issues.

The following fellows are in political science:

William J. Gould, government, Georgetown University. The Challenge of Liberal Political Culture in the Thought of John Courtney Murray.

Mark Lilla, government, Harvard University. The Political Philosophy of Giambattista Vico.

In addition to the above, honorary fellows were named who accepted awards from other sources. The following honorary winner is in political science:

Thomas W. Heilke, political science, Duke University. Paideia and Transformation: Friedrich Nietzsche's Concept of Political Education.

German Academic Exchange Service

In its 25th anniversary year, the German Academic Exchange Service has appointed several interns for 3-month periods in the Deutscher Bundestag, Bonn and Informationszentrum, Berlin. The internships are funded by the offices concerned, with travel subsidies from the Exchange Service. Interns are as follows:

Deutscher Bundestag, Bonn

Peter Burbank, SAIS, The Johns Hopkins University.

Stephanie Griffith, Kennedy School, Harvard University.

Susan Riska, Amherst College.

Ellen P. Ruffing, Union College.

Rani D. Tudor, University of New Hampshire.

Informationszentrum, Berlin

Jean-Pierre Castillejo, Monterey Institute of International Studies.

Kimberly A. DiDomenico, College of William and Mary.

Sami Renea Fournier, University of Kansas.

Constance E. Richards, Georgetown University.

For information on possible 1990 programs, write German Internship Programs, P.O. Box 345, Durham, New Hampshire 03824.

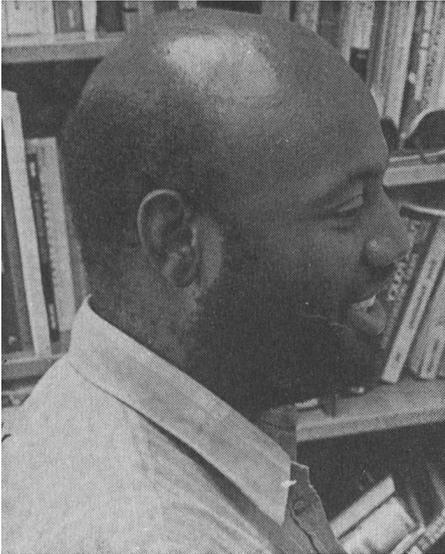

International Research & Exchanges Board

IREX, the International Research & Exchanges Board, 126 Alexander Street, Princeton, NJ 08540-7102, has announced grant recipients in its 1988 selection. Listed below are political scientists.

Grants for Collaborative Projects

William Fierman, department of political science, University of Tennessee at Knoxville: to travel to Uzbekistan (USSR) and collaborate with Uzbek scholar Yigitlu Usmanov on translation of the short novel Dunyaning ishlari (Earthly Matters).

Peter Hauslohner, department of political science, Yale University: for Soviet scholar Gavrill Kharitonovich Popov to take part in a Workshop on "Political Control of the Soviet Economy" at Yale University.

BYRAN O. JACKSON

Bradley Scharf, department of political science, Seattle University: to cover expenses of scholar from the German Democratic Republic to collaborate on project on conditions of life in urban industrial environments.

Travel Grants for Senior Scholars

David Olson, department of political science, University of North Carolina-Greensboro: to give a series of lectures in Poland at the University of Warsaw and to research the activities of the Polish Sejm as well as lectures in Yugoslavia.

Grants for Independent Short-Term Research

James McAdams, department of politics, Princeton University: to do interviews in the German Democratic Republic on the institutional context of foreign policy decision making and GDR economic and trade relationships with the Federal Republic of Germany.

National Research Council

The National Research Council has announced 26 recipients of fellowships under the Ford Foundation Postdoctoral Fellowships for Minorities Program and the recipients of 55 predoctoral and 21 dissertation fellowships under the Ford Foundation Predoctoral and Dissertation Fellowships for Minorities Program.

Following are the political scientists.

Postdoctoral Fellows

Velma E. Garcia, University of Mexico.

Byran O. Jackson, University of California at Berkeley.

Dissertation Fellows

Desiree S. Pedescleaux, Yale University.

Albert L. Vourvoulias-Bush, Yale University.

David E. Wilkins, University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

Southwestern Political Science Association

Calvin Jillson, University of Colorado, was awarded the Pi Sigma Alpha Best Paper Award, 1988 Convention, for "The Intellectual Context of Critical Realignment and Governmental Response."

William Pearson and David Castle, Lamar University, won the Southwestern Political Science Association Best Paper Award, 1988 Convention, for "Judicial Selection Methods: An Analysis of Texas Judges' Preferences."

Other Awards and Honors

Eloise Buker, Gonzaga University, received the Alpha Sigma Nu award for the best book in the social sciences for the 1987 year by a Jesuit faculty member for Politics Through a Looking-Glass: Understanding Political Cultures Through a Structuralist Interpretation of Narratives, Greenwood Press, 1987. Buker also received the Western Political Science Association's 1988 award for an outstanding paper on women and politics at the annual meeting of the Association for "Hidden Desires and Missing Persons: A Feminist Deconstruction of Foucault."

Nancie Caraway, University of Hawaii, received honorable mention from the Western Political Science Association for "Black Feminist Identity Politics and Shifting Selves" in their 1988 award selection for outstanding papers on women and politics at the annual meeting of the Association.

Lief H. Carter, department of political science, University of Georgia, received a Josiah Meigs Award for Excellence in Teaching. This is the second time he has won this award which is given for quality instruction and overall contributions to education.

Ross Cheit, assistant professor of political science and public policy, Brown University, was the recipient of The Barrett Hazeltine Citation, at the University's 221st Commencement, May 29, 1989. The citation is given to selected members of the University's faculty and staff by graduating seniors and medical students as an expression of respect and appreciation for people with whom the classes have worked most closely.

Stephen P. Cohen, University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign, has received a U.S. Institute of Peace Grant for academic year 1989-90.

Paul F. Diehl, University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign, has received a U.S. Institute of Peace Grant for academic year 1989-90.

Anne Freedman, professor of political science at Roosevelt University, won the 1988 Public Administration Review Award for the best lead article of the year for her article "Doing Battle with the Patronage Army: Politics, Courts and Personnel Administration in Chicago."

D. Alexander Guy, University of Southern California, former APSA Summer Fellow, has won a Keith Murray Fellowship to Oxford to study for a master's degree.

Lief H. Carter (l.) receives the University of Georgia's Josiah Meigs Award from Thomas Lauth, Head, department of political science.

Edward A. Kolodziej, University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign, has received a U.S. Institute of Peace Grant for academic year 1989-90.

W. Lee Johnston, University of North Carolina at Wilmington, was awarded the Board of Trustees Annual Award for Excellence in Teaching. This award includes a cash award of $1,500.

Roger E. Kanet, of the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign, was a recipient of a University Burlington Northern Faculty Achievement Award for 1989.

Kent Kirwan, professor of political science, University of Nebraska at Omaha, received the university's Excellence in Teaching Award for 1989.

Carol W. Kohfeld, associate professor of political science, University of Missouri-St. Louis, and John Sprague, professor of political science, Washington University, received a National Science Foundation grant for their study, "Collaborative Research on the Police and Criminal Interaction and the Constraints Arising from Social Structure."

People in Political Science

Susan A. MacManus, political science, University of South Florida, received a Fulbright Research Award for fall 1989. She will be studying Public Sector Stimulants to Local Economic Growth and Development in Korea and will be affiliated with Yonsei University's Graduate School of International Affairs and Graduate School of Public Administration in Seoul, Korea.

Joyce M. Mushaben, associate professor of political science, University of Missouri-St. Louis, is in Washington, D.C. on a Ford Foundation Fellowship for the academic year 1989-90, for her study, "Through the Looking Glass—The Cultivation of Post-war National Consciousness in the German Democratic Republic."

Daniel Palazzolo, department of government, University of Virginia, received a summer grant from the Robert H. Horwitz Memorial Foundation to support a Ph.D. dissertation on "The Role of the Speaker in the Congressional Budget Process."

Frederic Pearson, professor of political science, University of Missouri-St. Louis, received two grants, a John D. and Catherine T. MacArthur Foundation and a United States Institute of Peace grant for his proposal, "Fuel on the Fire?: Effects of Armament During Warfare," with Michael Brzoska of Hamburg (FRG) University.

J. Martin Rochester, associate professor of political science, University of Missouri-St. Louis, received a United States Institute of Peace grant for his study, "A Proposal to Revive the Theory and Practice of International Organization: Laying a Foundation for International Institution-Building in the Late 20th Century."

Wayne A. Selcher, political science, Elizabethtown College, has received a Fulbright Faculty Research Abroad grant from the U.S. Department of Education for a field trip to Brazil to study the impact of decentralized federalism on party and electoral systems. Selcher also lectured on American foreign policy in Spanish at the FLACSO Institute, Buenos Aires in June 1989, with an inter-commission extension to Chile.

Zoltan Tarr, Rutgers University, has been awarded a Fulbright grant to conduct research in Hungary.

Sidney Tarrow, department of government, Cornell University, has received a 1989 Research Fellowship from the German Marshall Fund for "The End of Wars and Social Protest: A Paired Comparison of Italy and France."

Claude Welch, professor of political science, State University of New York at Buffalo, was named Distinguished Service Professor by the Board of Trustees of the State University of New York.

In Memoriam

Augustus Alvin Adair

Augustus Alvin Adair, professor of political science at Morgan State University since 1963, died of cancer on May 12, 1989. He was fifty-six.

Augustus Adair was born in Chicago, Illinois, but grew up in Tuskegee, Alabama. He graduated from Tuskegee Institute Laboratory, and High School, received his B.A. degree in political science from Morehouse College in 1954, his M.A. in political science from Atlanta University in 1955, did graduate work at the University of Michigan and Boston University, and earned his Ph.D. in political science from Johns Hopkins University in 1977. He taught at Mississippi Valley Vocational College 1955-57, served two years in the U.S. Army and subsequently taught at Grambling College 1959-61. Gus, as he was known by his colleagues and friends, was an American Political Science Association Congressional Fellow in the office of Representative Adam Clayton Powell 1961-63. From 1963-67, Gus was Director of Morgan's Institute for Political Education. He was also the first Executive Director of the Congressional Black Caucus 1973-75. At the time of his death, Gus was completing a year as visiting professor at Bowdoin College in Brunswick, Maine.