THE GARLAND COMPANION TO VLADIMIR NABOKOV

NEW

Edited by
Vladimir E. Alexandrov, Yale University

Some 75 articles by 42 distinguished literary scholars, including the world's best-known specialists on Nabokov, focus on all aspects of his legacy: novels, short stories, poems, plays, lectures, criticism, translations, chess problems, lepidoptera studies, and letters. Examining his beliefs, artistic practices, and literary affinities, the Companion constitutes a kind of encyclopedia of Nabokov, and occupies a unique niche in scholarship about him. The coverage includes a chronology of Nabokov's life and works, bibliographies of primary and secondary sources, and a detailed index.

GENOCIDE IN BOSNIA

The Policy of "Ethnic Cleansing"

Norman Cigar

The author presents the first scholarly study of genocide in Bosnia-Herzegovina, arguing that it is neither the unintentional result of civil war nor the unfortunate by-product of rabid nationalism. He contends that the slaughter of Muslims in Bosnia was a policy decision made by Serbian leadership, a policy publicly communicated and executed in a systematic manner as part of a broader political strategy to create an ethnically pure Greater Serbia. 264 pp. 7 line drawings. 1 map. $29.95

This cartoon from a Catholic publication suggests that the UN is shielding the bloodied dagger in the fez and thus approves of atrocities against Muslims.

The New York Times Book Review*

In The Impossible Country, Brian Hall relates his encounters with Serbs, Croats, and Muslims—"real people, likeable people" who are now overcome with suspicion and anxiety about one another. Inverting our perceptions of the country, its politics, its history, its animosities, he presents a portrait of a country that possibly should have never been, and is in the process of ensuring that it will never be again.

Russian Literature and Empire

The Conquest of the Caucasus from Pushkin to Tolstoy

Susan Layton

This is the first synthesizing study of Russian writing about the Caucasus during the nineteenth-century age of empire-building. It covers major writers including Pushkin, Tolstoy and Lermontov, but also introduces material from travelogues, oriental studies, ethnography, memoirs, and the utterances of tsarist officials and military commanders. Setting these writings and the responses of the Russian readership in historical and cultural context, Layton examines ways that literature underwrote imperialism.

Wagner and Russia

Rosamund Bartlett

This book explores the immense influence of the composer Richard Wagner on nineteenth- and twentieth-century Russian writers, musicians and artists. It contains a history of the production of Wagner's works in Russia and the Soviet Union, an account of Wagner's visit to Russia in 1863, and a detailed investigation of the impact of his music and ideas on the Russian Modernist movement.

A History of Russian Symbolism

Avril Pyman

This book is the first detailed history of the Russian Symbolist movement, which served as the seedbed of Existentialism and Modernism in Russia. It reassesses the symbolists' achievements in the light of modern research, focusing on their literary works. Prose is quoted in English translation and poetry is given in the original Russian with prose translations. There is a valuable bibliography of primary sources and an extensive chronological appendix.

Russian Critics on the Cinema of Glasnost

Michael Brashinsky and Andrew Horton, Editors

This collection brings together 23 essays by some of Russia's most astute commentators of film and culture, written during the 1980s and published here in English for the first time. Their comments illuminate important aspects of Russian filmmaking during this decade and capture a sense of a society in flux during the waning years of Communism.

CEU

SENIOR ARCHIVIST POSITION AVAILABLE

The Central European University (CEU), in collaboration with the Open Media Research Institute (OMRI), has embarked on the development of a major archive for the study of post-World War II communism. The Archive is located in an historic palace in the center of Budapest with complete state-of-the-art information technology. The Radio Free Europe/Radio Liberty historical archives, of which the Archive is custodian, will be the core of the collections. Negotiations are being conducted for the acquisition of the records of Index on Censorship and the UN War Crimes Commission. The Archive will be an open-access facility dedicated to furthering the understanding of post-war events in Eastern and Central Europe and the former Soviet Union. The Archive will continue to support the research and broadcasting needs of OMRI and the Radios in Prague.

Under the supervision of the Chief Archivist, the Senior Archivist will have overall responsibility for at least one of the discrete OMRI collections housed in the repository. S/he will organize, maintain and provide reference services for the collection(s), meeting the immediate needs of the OMRI-Prague staff and those of the greater research community. The Senior Archivist will participate actively in the development of both traditional and electronic access tools, such as finding aids and databases, for the collection(s). Further responsibilities will include supervision of support staff and public service duties in the Reading Room, as needed.

Duties and Responsibilities:

- Organization and maintenance of OMRI collection(s), as well as reference services for the materials;
- Development of user access programs—both traditional and electronic—ensuring open access in a context of security of archival materials;
- In collaboration with OMRI-Prague, development of effective and timely information transfer procedures for service to remote users as RFE/RL and OMRI;
- Supervision of support staff, including student interns;
- Public service in the Reading Room;
- Other duties, as needed.

Qualifications:

- Advanced degree in archival studies or related field, or equivalent professional archival experience;
- Knowledge of use of electronic media and telecommunications technology for the organization, preservation and delivery of information;
- Knowledge of professional archival programs, including the organization and description of archival materials;
- Working knowledge of a minimum of one language of the region, preferably Russian or Polish;
- Experience supervising support staff is highly desirable, but not required;
- Academic or experiential background in the contemporary history of Eastern/Central Europe and the former Soviet Union is highly desirable, but not required.

Priority will be given to applicants who submit a detailed curriculum vitae in English with 3 references (including address, telephone, fax and e-mail) by October 15, 1995, to:
