

The Liber Augustalis or the Constitutions of Melfi Promulgated by the Emperor Frederick II for the Kingdom of Sicily in 1231

Translated, with introduction and notes, by James M. Powell

This first translation of the Liber Augustalis from the Latin into a modern language makes available to a wide audience one of the most important sources for medieval legal and social history. The victorious Emperor Frederick II ordered the compilation of this body of law as a cornerstone of his royal authority. Blending many disparate influences and legal traditions into a common law, the Liber Augustalis reveals much of thirteenth century political and social life, the conception of the monarchy and its rights and responsibilities, and the manner in which thirteenth-century lawyers attempted to deal with the problems of their day.

The Constitutions are divided into three Books. Book I is concerned with public law, questions of heresy, the basis of royal power, and the officials of the kingdom. Book II is devoted chiefly to procedural law in both civil and criminal cases, and Book III deals with feudal and private law and the punishment of crimes. Anyone reading this volume will be struck by how far-sighted many of these laws were, and how fresh they seem even to twentieth-century eyes—laws dealing, for instance, with the legal status of women, adultery, prostitution, courtroom conduct, malpractice, and even air pollution.

The importance of this book to the legal scholar and the medievalist is apparent. The nonspecialist will find that the unusual clarity and directness of the translation makes it wholly accessible—and fascinating—to him as well.

International Law, National Tribunals, and the Rights of Aliens

Frank G. Dawson and Ivan L. Head

When an individual's person or property is injured or taken by a foreign country, the usual course is to seek relief or recompense from that country through its courts before attempting to persuade his own country to make it a diplomatic or international legal matter. Today there are many more individuals traveling or residing outside their own nations than ever before, subject to a wide variety of legal prescriptions often quite unlike the legal systems of their own countries. A practical guide through the legal labyrinth has long been needed, and this book is designed to provide it.

The authors examined the written law in 24 of the leading countries representing the world's major legal systems, and then visited those countries to see how the laws work in practice in relation to aliens. African, South American, Asian, and European countries were studied, as were Great Britain, Canada, Australia, and the United States.

The result is a book of significant value to individuals and corporations, and to international lawyers representing corporate clients—a handy and concise treatment of the major legal, as well as nonlegal, problems confronting the enforcement of the rights of aliens in foreign countries.

Russian Peasant Organisation before Collectivisation

D.J.MALE

After the Russian Revolution the Soviet government unsuccessfully tried to supplant the old Russian land-holding communes by instituting the rural soviets. This book sets the commune firmly in its agricultural perspective before tracing the social and political developments from 1925 to the onset of mass collectivisation in 1930. £4.00 net

Utopia and Reform in the Enlightenment

FRANCO VENTURI

The G. M. Trevelyan Lectures for 1969 are a detailed study of the republican tradition in the development of the Enlightenment. The central problem of utopia and reform is crystallized in a discussion of the right to punish. Examples are drawn from the political situations of several European countries during the 17th and 18th centuries. £2.60 net

Comparative Studies in Society and History is a forum for presentation and discussion of new research into problems of change and stability that recur in human societies through time or in the contemporary world. It sets up a working alliance between specialists in all branches of the social sciences and humanities. Debate and review articles bring the general reader in touch with current findings and issues.

NOTES FOR CONTRIBUTORS

Contributions may be descriptive, analytical or theoretical. Any article not in itself comparative may be accepted if it lends itself to comment that will place it in comparative perspective. Correspondence with the editors prior to the submission of articles will help to enable them to obtain such comment or a companion study. Emphasis in comparative studies may be either on similarities or, if these are significant enough and call for some recasting of generalisations, on differences. All contributions and editorial correspondence should be sent to the Editors, Comparative Studies in Society and History, Department of History, University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Michigan 48104.

Two copies of each contribution, preferably accompanied by a stamped, addressed envelope, should be submitted. Both text and footnotes should be clearly typed with double spacing and wide margins; footnotes should appear on separate pages at the end of the article. Illustrations may be included by arrangement with the editors.

Contributors will receive 50 offprints bound in the journal covers. Any additional offprints must be ordered on receipt of the first proof.
