

Erratum

Interests, Issues, and Preferences: Women's Interests and Epiphenomena of Activism – ERRATUM

Karen Beckwith

doi:10.1017/S1743923X11000195, Published by Cambridge University Press, 1 November 2011.

We regret that the originally published paper (Beckwith, 2011) did not contain the correct footnotes.

We apologize for this oversight and reproduce the author's footnotes below:

THE CORRECTION

From page 424, line 37:

I am grateful to Suzanne Dovi and Leslie Schwindt-Bayer for their helpful comments on the initial version of this essay.

From page 425, lines 77-80:

- 1 Among other interests that can be identified from women's self-organizing in contexts of relative autonomy and free deliberation are women's control of their reproductive capacity and bodily integrity; and women's personal and citizen autonomy, including freedom of mobility.

Published by Cambridge University Press 1743-923X/12 $30.00 for The Women and Politics Research Section of the American Political Science Association.

© The Women and Politics Research Section of the American Political Science Association, 2012
doi:10.1017/S1743923X12000645

- 2 To paraphrase Sen (1999: 10), women's interest in access to political power is not only a primary end; it is its principal means of achieving that end.

REFERENCE

- Beckwith, Karen. 2011. "Interests, Issues, and Preferences: Women's Interests and Epiphenomena of Activism" Politics & Gender 7 (3): 424–429.