
Islam and Social Order in Mauritania

A Case Study from the Nineteenth Century

C. C. Stewart

This first scholarly study in English about Mauritanian history focuses on the career of the venerated jurist and mystic, Shaikh Sidiyya al-Kabir (1775–1868), who was a major religious and economic power and a political king-maker on the right bank of the Senegal by the mid-nineteenth century. The narrative of Sidiyya's rise to this position traces the intricacies of political alliances in south-western Mauritania and analyses the application of the shaikh's scholarship and his practice of Islamic law in a nomadic society. £4.50 Oxford Studies in African Affairs

Racial Bargaining in Independent Kenya

A Study of Minorities and Decolonization

Donald Rothchild

The author applies the bargaining model to inter-ethnic relations and conflict resolution among the three main racial communities in Kenya shortly before and after Independence in 1963. The ending of colonial rule saw direct bargaining among community leaders. Thereafter bargaining relationships shifted from direct to tacit exchanges over Africanization programmes, property rights, citizenship, the allocation of resources, etc., as an effect of the government's desire to preserve close links with the Western capitalist economy and a recognition of the important non-African contribution to Kenya's economic development. £7 Institute of Race Relations

South Africa's Foreign Policy 1947-1970

James Barber

South Africa's foreign relations, more than those of any other non-communist country, have been shaped by her internal political and social structure, which has aroused wide public interest in her standing among the nations. With these features in mind Dr Barber examines South Africa's post-war foreign policy, emphasizing the close relationship between domestic and external affairs and the relative ineffectiveness of diplomatic pressures. 8 plates 2 maps £4.50

You waited ten years for this book

Why?

Because there is no reference book available on the leading personalities in Africa. A proper appreciation of Africa's leaders is vital if you want to understand the continent's political and economic trends.

When?

WHO'S WHO IN AFRICA will be published in September this year. Incisive cameos of more than 600 leaders have been prepared under the supervision of joint editors – Alan Rake (Editor of AFRICAN DEVELOPMENT) and John Dickie (Diplomatic Correspondent of the London DAILY MAIL).

THE JOURNAL OF MODERN AFRICAN STUDIES

The Journal offers a quarterly survey of politics, economics, and related topics in contemporary Africa.

The main emphasis is upon the peoples and policies, the problems and progress of this dynamic and disparate continent; upon the many societies that are evolving rather than the essential characteristics of the old; upon the present, not on the more distant past. The best current work is sought from specialists in different academic disciplines, whose contributions can illuminate and cross-fertilise one another.

The Journal seeks to promote a deeper understanding of what is happening in Africa today. It is intended for both the political scientist and the practical politician, the administrator and the advocate, the economist and the educator, the banker and the businessman, the diplomat and the technocrat, the civil servant and the nationalist leader. All have something to contribute to these pages and, it is hoped, much to learn from them.

Editorial policy avoids commitment to any political viewpoint or ideology, whether imperialism, pan-Africanism, capitalism, socialism, or nationalism. Such concepts, however, have relevance to the modern African situation, and merit serious discussion, often from several different points of view, in order that controversial issues may be fairly examined.
