Consultant opportunities throughout England

Clinical Radiology • Clinical Oncology • Histopathology • Psychiatry

Medicine in England enjoys a world-class reputation. We're now investing enough money into the National Health Service to make it the fastest growing health service of any major European country. That's why we're recruiting more qualified senior doctors from around the world to help us achieve our aims.

We are looking for medical specialists at consultant level (the most senior hospital doctors in England) to take up two year Fellowships in clinical practice. We need candidates of the highest calibre, and in return we're offering excellent benefits, an attractive salary and pension package, the opportunity to broaden your skills and extend your professional contacts, a full induction programme and ongoing mentoring. Plus our position as the largest employer in Europe means that we can offer you the choice and flexibility to achieve your ambitions (including the chance to take part in clinical research).

In order to practice as a consultant in England, you must have a specialist medical qualification either recognised in the United Kingdom (UK) or equivalent to a UK Certificate of Completion of Specialist Training (CCST). You must also have a fluent command of the English language.

UK CCST holders either resident or non-resident in the UK may apply. Applications for appointment on a part-time or job share basis will be considered.
