
The City in Late Imperial China

Edited by G. William Skinner. Sixteen papers by social scientists and institutional historians examine various aspects of the traditional Chinese city. The editor has contributed two long papers and introductions to the book's three parts: "The City in History," "The City in Space," and "The City as a Social System." Illustrated with 58 maps and plates, the work also includes special endpaper maps showing the cities of China in 1894 classified according to size, administrative level, and economic importance. $35.00

Mo-tzu, a philosopher of the Warring States period (480-221BC), spent most of his life working for the welfare of others. His doctrines of charity (love without distinction), anti-warism, equality, and thrift are reflected in the fifteen-section book Motzu and for a time kept pace with those of the Confucianists.

This collection brings together the results of much hard work by both ancient and modern scholars. It also contains various editions of Motzu from the early Ming to the present. A total of 371 chüan are bound in 46 volumes. A detailed index to authors is included.

“Certain to be the standard guide to the literature of Tokagowa Japan.”

—The Kirkus Reviews

From Donald Keene, the Western world's most eminent authority on Japanese literature, comes “an encyclopedic history . . . written with masterly erudition and discernment.”*

In the first of three volumes, Keene's unparalleled study brings to life the people, the culture, and the literary traditions of Japan's middle period—with penetrating analyses of major authors.

“The erudition and scholarship are impressive indeed. If there is anyone else on the scene who has been through such a body of difficult material and is prepared to organize it with such care and intelligence, one is hard put to think who it might be.

—EDWARD G. SEIDENSTICKER,
The Chronicle of Higher Education

“. . . definitive as it surely must be, it is rich with other pleasures, both of history and art.”

—HORTENSE CALISHER

“. . . provides the crucial information we need for a more intelligent grasp of a magnificent body of literature . . . and the people who created it.”

—SANTHA RAMA RAU

The Chinese Communist Treatment of Counterrevolutionaries, 1924-1949

Patricia Griffin

Griffin contends that an understanding of how the Chinese Communists created a legal system at a time of rapid shifts in the political culture is essential to a grasp of more recent events. Focusing on the Communists' definition and treatment of counterrevolutionaries, she describes and assesses the contribution of environment, ideology, and leadership in the development of legal techniques used by the Communists in their rise to power. Studies in East Asian Law, Harvard University $15.00

Archetype and Allegory in the Dream of the Red Chamber

Andrew H. Plaks

Surprisingly little has been written in Western languages about the 18th-century Chinese novel Dream of the Red Chamber, perhaps the supreme masterpiece of its entire tradition. In this study, Plaks has used the conceptual tools of comparative literature to focus on the novel's allegorical elements and narrative structure. He also provides a significant demonstration that critical concepts derived from Western literary models may be fruitfully applied to Chinese narrative works. Illus. • $15.50

Artists and Traditions

Uses of the Past in Chinese Culture

Edited by Christian F. Murck

The essays in this book are concerned with a central problem in Chinese cultural history—its relation to its own past. Originally presented at a colloquium held in conjunction with the exhibition of Chinese paintings "In Pursuit of Antiquity" at The Art Museum, Princeton University, the papers represent the thought of specialists in intellectual history, literature, social history, and art history, on the subject of creativity within a continuing tradition in China. The Politics of Cultural Nationalism in South India

MARGUERITE ROSS BARNETT

Barnett analyzes a successful political movement in South India that used cultural nationalism as a positive force for change. By exploring the history of Dravida Munnetra Kazhagam party, the author provides a new perspective on political identity and challenges the interpretation of cultural nationalism as an inherent threat to the integrity of territorially defined nation-states and to the progress of modernization. $22.50

THE PERFORMING ARTS PROGRAM OF THE ASIA SOCIETY is pleased to announce the following programs available in 1977-1978.

PENCA (The Art of Self-Defense) and TOPENG BABAKAN (Masked Dance) from Sunda, West Java Twelve Persons

Penca is unique in that the movements of self-defense so popular throughout Asia have been set to a distinctive type of music provided by drums, a reed instrument, and a small gong.

In Topeng Babakan, a single dancer, accompanied by gamelan music, portrays five different types of characters, using beautifully-wrought masks—the dancer losing his identity and becoming the character represented by the mask.

Availability: East—October 5-31, 1977; Midwest—November 1-14, 1977; West—November 15-22, 1977.

THOVIL (The Ritual Chanting, Dance, and Drumming of Exorcism) from Sri Lanka Six Persons

From the south of Sri Lanka (Ceylon) comes this exciting ceremonial: witch doctors wearing demon masks dance, eat fire, twirl torches to the accompaniment of the yak-bere (devil drum) and chant in invocation of the spirits. The colorful costumes, exotic masks, and acrobatic dances have remained unchanged for centuries, and will give a glimpse of shamanism as it is still practiced in Sri Lanka today.

Availability: East—February 1-25, 1978; Midwest—February 26-March 8, 1978; West—March 9-22, 1978.

QAWWALI MUSIC FROM PAKISTAN Ten Persons

This inspiring devotional music, which is the musical expression of the Sufis, is vocal music performed by soloists and ensemble singers accompanied by drum, harmonium, and handclapping. The repetition of certain phrases of qawwali poetry (which emphasizes mystical love or praise of God, the Prophet, and saints) builds towards a state of ecstasy.

Availability: East—March 7-24, 1978; Midwest—March 25-April 2, 1978; West—April 3-13, 1978.

All three groups will be available for concerts, master-classes, lecture-demonstrations and in-residencies. For further information please write to Mrs. Beate Gordon, Director, The Performing Arts Program of The Asia Society, 133 East 58th Street, 15th floor, New York, N.Y. 10022. The Vedic Experience Mantramañjari

An Anthology of the Vedas for Modern Man and Contemporary Celebration
Raimundo Panikkar

The most crucial texts of the Indian Sacred Scriptures—in all, more than 500, newly translated into contemporary English—are collected in this anthology. The commentaries and translations do not give a specifically western, Christian, or Hindu interpretation, but try to make the texts intelligible to the modern reader by presenting ancient wisdom in its own clearest light. This is a book for meditation, for reading, public and private, as well as for thorough study at the wellspring of human wisdom.

China after the Cultural Revolution

Jürgen Domes

Translated from the German by David Goodman

Domes draws on an astonishing amount of information—found in radio dispatches from outlying provinces, confidential official reports, and the like—generally overlooked by foreign analysts. Emphasizing political rather than social or economic aspects of developments between 1969 and 1973, his acute insights help to make the tortured course of the Cultural Revolution more readily understandable.

A NEW HISTORY OF INDIA

STANLEY WOLPERT, University of California, Los Angeles. This survey analysis portrays the transformation of South Asian Civilization from its Indus Valley culture over 4,000 years ago to the subcontinental Nation States of India, Pakistan, and Bangladesh. The complex nature of Hinduism, the institutional characteristics of ancient India's great Imperial unifications and early urbanization, the impact of Islam and of Muslim conquests on the culture and society of North India, and the process of Western commercial penetration are reviewed and analyzed. India's subsequent modernization, National Liberation struggle and separatist Muslim Independence movement that led to the birth of Pakistan, as well as the era of Independent India's Raj and the emergence of Bangladesh, are reconstructed in a humanistic synthesis of cultural, political, and socio-economic history.

LOVE AND STRUGGLE IN MAO'S THOUGHT

by Raymond Whitehead

This study of Mao's ethic faces head-on the features of Mao's thought that are so difficult for us in the West to accept: class struggle, "brain-washing," revolutionary violence, hatred of the class enemy, worldwide spread of revolution, anti-individualism. This is a sympathetic yet critical appreciation of the ethical teaching of the man who has done so much to shape the twentieth century. "I am convinced," writes Whitehead, "that we are dealing not simply with ideas, but with the great realities of our era. I hope this book helps readers to come to a new awareness of the ethical choices they face in a world of oppression and struggle."

Raymond L. Whitehead has been Asia Research Consultant for the National Council of Churches and a faculty member of the Chinese University of Hong Kong. Co-author of China! Inside the People's Republic (Bantam), his articles have been published in Christian Century, Christian Science Monitor, Christianity and Crisis and the International Review of Mission.

IMPERIAL CRIME AND PUNISHMENT

The Massacre at Jallianwala Bagh and British Judgment, 1919-1920

by Helen Fein

Why do people authorize and condone violence against those of different ethnic and racial groups—violence that would be punishable if committed against their own group? This study of the massacre that killed more than 500 unarmed Indians in the Punjab and caused educated Indians to lose faith in British justice shows how a social order based on membership in racial, ethnic, religious, or national groups tends to produce class crimes and class solidarity. The author's conclusions have implications not only for the study of colonial situations, but also for an understanding of present-day race relations, criminal justice in multi-ethnic societies, and genocide.

WAR CRIMINAL

The Life and Death of Hirota Koki

by Saburo Shiroyama

translated by John Bester

War criminal? Here is an inside view of the dramatic events surrounding the former Foreign and Prime Minister of Japan sentenced to death by the Far East Tribunal after World War II. In the thirties, Hirota tried in vain to suppress the rising tide of jingoistic militarism. Yet, during the trials in which he was designated as one of the principal men responsible for the war, Hirota said nothing in his own defense.

Beneath the narrative, author Saburo Shiroyama poses the larger question of the validity of war crimes tribunals and explores the complexities of the confrontation between government and military. Fascinating reading.

THE HISTORICAL LITERATURE OF MORI ŌGAI

Volume 1: The Incident at Sakai and other stories

Volume 2: Saiki Kōi and other stories

edited by David Dilworth and J. Thomas Rimer

Although Ōgai's reputation as a writer of stature was made in the period between his return from Germany in 1888 and the death of the Emperor Meiji in 1912, it was the latter event that turned his interest to the past and impelled him into the series of historical stories that have secured his prominent place in modern Japanese literature. These stories resound with the cool clarity of Ōgai's precise, brilliant, and deliberate style. Set principally in the Tokugawa period, they are not historical fiction in the popular sense; they do not glorify the past. Rather they provide a means for Ōgai to deal with contemporary moral and philosophical problems from an artistic perspective congenial to him and suited to his most profound concerns: loyalty, sincerity, intellectual honesty, independence of spirit, the beauty of virtue.
