

The Peoples and Policies of South Africa

LEO MARQUARD

First published in 1952, this book was revised and brought up to date in 1960 and again in 1962. Since 1962 there have been considerable changes in South Africa, necessitating a new and largely rewritten edition. 15/- net Oxford Paperbacks

Sir Ian Scott, British Ambassador in Leopoldville from February 1960 to July 1961, was eye-witness to the upheaval of Independence and a chief participant in the momentous events of that time. His personal memoir is an account of what happened. 4 plates 1 map 30/- net

West African Trade and Coast Society

A Family Study

MARGARET PRIESTLEY

The impact of Westernization on the coastal Akan of Ghana is portrayed through the history of a family of mixed descent, starting with its Irish progenitor Richard Brew, in the eighteenth century. The lives of a number of his mulatto descendants are examined against changing economic, political, and social conditions. 3 line maps 4 plates 55/- net

AFRICAN RURAL-URBAN MIGRATION

The Movement to Ghana's Towns

John C. Caldwell

In the fast-growing populations of the developing tropics, rural areas are no longer able to absorb the vast increases in their populations. In Ghana the result is striking—over a quarter of the population now lives in the towns.

This book sets out to examine the kinds of people migrating to the towns, the effect of their migration on the rural areas they leave and the urban areas they adopt, their methods of travel and of solving the problems of accommodation and work, their degree of satisfaction with town life, the numbers returning to the village, and their reasons for doing so. It thus discusses whether and when a truly urban population is created.

Dr John C. Caldwell is Regional Demographic Director for Africa for The Population Council, author of Population Growth and Family Change in Africa and co-author of The Population of Tropical Africa.

The Civil Service in Commonwealth Africa

A. L. ADU, Deputy Secretary-General, Commonwealth Secretariat

Describes the changing role of the Civil Service in Commonwealth Africa from the colonial era, through the post-independence transition to the present state of its rapid transformation, development plans and problems in a contemporary, independent Africa. The author, widely known as a leading authority in his field, has intimate contacts with those who have worked on the frontiers of policy in almost all the Commonwealth African states. Cloth 40s Paper 26s

The Economies of Africa

Edited by P. R. ROBSON, Professor of Economics, University College, Nairobi

AND D. A. LURY, Senior Lecturer in Economic and Social Statistics, University of Kent

This book builds around a common framework structural and analytical studies of seven widely differing African countries, together with two studies of groups of countries which, although politically separate, have in the past had close economic links. The countries have been chosen to bring out the main economic issues arising in the efforts of the newly independent African States to achieve economic growth. 80s

Empire and Commerce in Africa A Study in Economic Imperialism

LEONARD WOOLF

Originally published in 1920, this book investigates the relations between Power, Policy and Commerce in Africa, allowing the facts presented to draw their own picture of economic imperialism. The author attempts to trace the effect of the imperialism of European States both upon the citizens and policy of those States in Europe and upon Africa and the Africans. 50s

Eastern Nigeria: A Geographical Review

Barry Floyd

This book aims to establish a vantage point from which to observe the Eastern Nigerian scene, and to examine the many varied ways of life which make up the geographical personality of the region. Specific attention is paid to the people, particularly to their ethnic diversities and the remarkable disparities in their areal distribution. The author also looks at the future of Nigeria and sets the stage for the formidable task of reconstruction which lies ahead.

GENEVA-AFRICA

THE JOURNAL OF THE GENEVA-AFRICA INSTITUTE

Africa in time past lent the European imagination that touch of exotic adventure which its own milieu did not always provide. That time is no more. Africa today seeks her own way through difficulties and incertitudes to which no one open to her desire to meet on terms of equality can remain indifferent.

It is the wish of Geneva-Africa to be an active partner in this unconditional dialogue, and to contribute to a deeper comprehension of the problems and opportunities facing an emergent Africa.

The Princes of Nyakyusa

SIMON CHARSELEY

This first-rate study has just been published for the Makerere Institute of Social Research. The Nyakyusa of Southern Tanzania are among the best known of African peoples in the literature of social anthropology. In this readable but scholarly book Simon Charsley demonstrates the subtle but fundamental changes brought about in the Nyakyusa perception of their indigenous political system, and in particular the role of the prince, in the period of European overrule.

Political Development in Rural Tanzania

DR GORAN HYDEN

TANU's role in the process of national development of Tanzania is the central theme of this exciting new study of politics in Tanzania. Dr Hyden takes as his starting point President Nyerere's famous 1961 dictum: 'While some nations aim at the moon, we are aiming at the village'. The author has focused on the relationship between the rural inhabitants of Buhaya and the centre of the political system of which they are members.

THE JOURNAL OF MODERN AFRICAN STUDIES

The Journal offers a quarterly survey of politics, economics, and related topics in contemporary Africa.

The main emphasis is upon the peoples and policies, the problems and progress of this dynamic and disparate continent; upon the many societies that are evolving rather than the essential characteristics of the old; upon the present, not on the more distant past. The best current work is sought from specialists in different academic disciplines, whose contributions can illuminate and cross-fertilise one another.

The Journal seeks to promote a deeper understanding of what is happening in Africa today. It is intended for both the political scientist and the practical politician, the administrator and the advocate, the economist and the educator, the banker and the businessman, the diplomat and the technocrat, the civil servant and the nationalist leader. All have something to contribute to these pages and, it is hoped, much to learn from them.

Editorial policy avoids commitment to any political viewpoint or ideology, whether imperialism, pan-Africanism, capitalism, socialism, or nationalism. Such concepts, however, have relevance to the modern African situation, and merit serious discussion, often from several different points of view, in order that controversial issues may be fairly examined.
