

MODERN AMERICAN HISTORY

Volume 4, Issue 3, November 2021

Articles

The New York Daily News and the History of Conservative Media

Matthew Pressman

Between the 1940s and the 1960s, the nation's highest-circulation newspaper stoked far-right populism among its white, working-class readers 219

American Demographers and Global Population Policy in the Postwar World

Emily Klancher Merchant

How U.S.-based philanthropies marshalled the scientific authority of demographic theory to shape population policy worldwide 239

“What Are We?”: Latino Politics, Identity, and Memory in the 1983 Chicago Mayoral Election

Jaime Sánchez, Jr.

The 1983 Chicago mayoral election laid bare anti-Blackness and disunity among Latino voters and captured the stakes of panethnic organizing 263

The Vital Center Reborn: Redefining Liberalism between 9/11 and the Iraq War

Joseph Stieb

When liberal intellectuals revived their belief in the ability of U.S. foreign policy to spread democratic values and human rights 285

Below the Fold

Q&A

The WRITER'S STUDIO with Philip J. Deloria

A leading scholar of Indigenous history answers questions about finding inspiration, organizing thoughts, and the pull of family pasts 305

The Soapbox

Why Pandemics Matter to the History of U.S. State Development

Stephen Colbrook

How public health crises confound scholars' narratives about twentieth-century American governance 315

Corrigendum

Cops at War: How World War II Transformed U.S. Policing – Corrigendum
Stuart Schrader

335