Helena and Margaret B. Goscilo

This book offers a political reading of Russian and American films in the Yeltsin era. It explores how, after the initial euphoria, both Russian cinema's and Hollywood's representation of the “partner” relied on old strategies to preserve claims of national superiority.

“Helena and Margaret Goscilo's study is dense, well written, full of insights, and makes an important contribution to Russian/ American film studies as well as scholarly works on the cultural Cold War.”

On Stalin's Team

The Years of Living Dangerously in Soviet Politics

Sheila Fitzpatrick

"On Stalin's Team is an utterly absorbing and sometimes blood-curdling account of the domestic and office life of the most bourgeois of proletarian dictators. Sheila Fitzpatrick's group biography of Stalin's inner circle of meritocratic bureaucrats and squalid mobsters is unputdownable."

—Bernard Wasserstein, author of

of Europe in Our Time*

Lydia Ginzburg's Prose

Reality in Search of Literature

Emily Van Buskirk

"This pathbreaking book, the first full-length intellectual biography of Lydia Ginzburg in any language, distills a decade of archival research into a courageous intimate portrait. Ginzburg was an outsider. A nonconforming Formalist, a lesbian, Jew, and principled atheist, she was above all a survivor. Rejecting individualism as outmoded while disdaining nihilistic or postmodernist solutions as puerile, she devised distanced, cerebral, nonromanticized genres of self-expression to transform her traumatized century into a sort of literary wisdom."
