Karl Marx's Philosophy of Man

John Plamenatz

This book deals with the most difficult and yet most important aspects of Marx's thought: his conception of man as an essentially social, self-creative, and progressive being liable to alienation, and the moral, cultural, and political implications of this conception. £9.50

Three Essays

On Liberty, Representative Government,
The Subjection of Women

J. S. Mill

Introduction by Richard Wollheim

In his introduction to this paperback edition, Professor Wollheim brings out the immediacy of Mill's essays for readers today. Although many of Mill's measures have been adopted, the essays are still relevant – when liberty and representative government are in collision with other principles, and when women have yet to gain unprejudiced general acceptance of their equality with men. £1.75 Oxford Paperbacks

British Government 1966–1975

Years of Reform

Frank Stacey

The past decade was one of unusually rapid change in British Government. This book is designed to give students an adequate description of the reforms which have been attempted, carried through, and planned in the central Civil Service, in local government, and in Parliament. The result of the EEC referendum is discussed. £6.50 paper covers £2.75

Studies in Politics

Essays to Mark the 25th Anniversary of the Political Studies Association

Edited by F. F. Ridley

This is a hard-cover edition of a special double issue of Political Studies, the journal of the Political Studies Association, which has been published to mark the Association's twenty-fifth anniversary in 1975. The articles are divided into two groups: the first concerned with the development in Britain of political studies; and the second covering various topics within political science. £6.25

Liu Shao-ch'i and the Chinese Cultural Revolution

THE POLITICS OF MASS CRITICISM

Lowell Dittmer

Riding a wave of criticism unprecedented in intensity or scope, China's Great Proletarian Cultural Revolution represented an epoch-making 'struggle between two lines' to determine the direction of national development at a critical transition point. Leader of the triumphant 'proletarian revolutionary line' was Mao Tse-tung; leader of the vanquished 'bourgeois reactionary line' was erstwhile Chief of State Liu Shao-ch'i, a prominent Communist theorist and organizer who had served as Mao's 'close comrade-in-arms' for more than twenty years and was his designated successor. What brought about this confrontation?

In his attempt to answer this question, Mr Dittmer illuminates the policy-making process of a revolutionary state facing the diverging exigencies of economic modernization and political development. Liu Shao-ch'i emerges as the symbol of a systematic endeavor to combine order with revolution and equality with economic efficiency and technocratic values. In the end, his vision of how this synthesis could be achieved was overwhelmed by the sweep and depth of the revolutionary drive in China, as symbolized by Mao Tse-tung, and Liu was destroyed politically.

Comparative Union Democracy

Organisation and Opposition in British and American Unions

J. David Edelstein and Malcolm Warner

The background to this new study of the theory of union democracy is an examination of thirty-one British and fifty-one American national trade unions. Supported by studies in depth of the political process in the British Mineworkers' Union and the Engineers' Union, the work develops and illustrates a general theory of how, in a country with democratic norms, formal organisation itself can constrain a tendency towards oligarchy by stimulating union competition among full-time officers attempting to rise in the union hierarchy.

POLITICAL MONEY

A Strategy for Campaign Financing in America

David W. Adamany and George E. Agree

In the aftermath of Watergate, Congress enacted the Federal Election Campaign Act of 1974. Questions about its constitutionality, its viability, and its cost are now being raised in the courts, in Congress, in the press, and by the citizens who will pay the bill.

David Adamany and George Agree, two leading questioners, share a belief that 'the existing method of financing campaigns is inconsistent with democratic ideals and that public financing of some kind is a necessary response'.

Political Money is their carefully reasoned and provocative response. In it, they advocate a unique system for publicly financing campaigns, one which recognizes the unusual contours and conditions of American politics. Their proposals are underscored by an analysis of the deficiencies of present legislation and by a tracing in facts and figures of the checkered history of American campaign financing.

Of interest to public official and citizen alike, this is a book that can totally change the patterns of political spending in America. 256 pages, £7.70

Notes for contributors

1 All contributions should be sent to: The Editor, British Journal of Political Science, University of Essex, Wivenhoe Park, Colchester, Essex CO4 3SQ. They should not be sent to the Cambridge University Press.

2 Articles submitted to the Journal should in general be between 5,000 and 12,000 words in length, though articles outside these limits will be acceptable if there is some good reason for their exceptional length or brevity. Articles in two parts may be accepted provided each part is independently intelligible.

3 Notes and comments are welcome. A Note should contain a body of original information, a new method for doing something or a new idea (speculation, argument, proof, etc.) presented in a brief and unadorned form without inessential commentary. Comments containing criticisms of articles published in the Journal and additional thoughts on them will be considered for early publication, especially if they are short – say, under 1,000 words.

4 Most issues of the Journal contain a Review Article – either a detailed discussion of a single book or a review of the state of some area of the discipline. Review Articles submitted without prior consultation will be considered for publication, but in their own interest contributors would be well advised not to prepare a Review Article specially for the Journal without first getting in touch with the Editor.

5 The Journal's editorial policy is as stated inside the front cover. Contributors should note the phrase 'problems of general significance to students of politics'. The Journal does not normally publish, for example, highly specialized contributions to the history of political thought or purely descriptive articles concerned with the current politics of particular countries. The Journal also prefers to publish contributions to the discipline of political science, rather than commentaries upon the discipline.

6 Authors of articles and Review Articles receive twenty-five free offprints. Additional copies may be bought if they are ordered at proof stage.

7 Submission of an article is taken to imply that it has not been previously published and is not being considered for publication elsewhere. In the interests of authors, copyright is normally assigned to the Cambridge University Press.

8 Contributions intended for publication should be submitted IN DUPLICATE. They must be typed and may be reproduced in any clearly legible form. The preferred size of paper is A4 (8½ × 11½ in), but quarto (8 × 10 in) or the US standard size (8½ × 11 in) will also be accepted. Because of postage costs, manuscripts not accepted for publication are not normally returned to the author unless their return is specifically requested.

9 The entire material of any article, including footnotes, quotations, appendices, etc., should be double spaced, with left-hand margins of at least 1½ in. The preferred treatment of footnotes is that they should be numbered consecutively in the text and typed all together at the end, beginning on a fresh page; but manuscripts employing other methods of arranging footnotes will not be rejected simply on those grounds.

10 Anyone who is preparing a manuscript for submission to the Journal is urged to follow the Journal's style sheet, which covers a number of detailed points concerning footnotes, punctuation, spelling, etc. Copies of the style sheet can be obtained from the Editor. Alternatively, contributors can follow the style used in any recent number of the Journal. Footnote references should always contain, in the case of books, the name of the author as it appears on the title page, the full title including any subtitle, the place of publication, the name of the publisher and the date of publication, and, in the case of articles, the name of the author, the full title, the name of the journal, the volume number, the year and the page reference (number of first and last page).

11 First proofs may be read and corrected by contributors provided that they can give the Editor an address through which they can be reached without delay and can guarantee to return the corrected proofs to the Editor, by air mail where appropriate, within ten days of receiving them. The master proof will always be sent directly to the Editor by the printer; contributors will receive duplicates.
