The Hungarians

A Thousand Years of Victory in Defeat
Paul Lendvai

In The Hungarians, Paul Lendvai tells the fascinating story of how the Hungarians, despite a string of catastrophes and their linguistic and cultural isolation, have survived as a nation-state for more than 1,000 years.

"This brief narrative of Hungarian history, elegantly translated into English, is written with verve, humor, profound insights, and just the right degree of cynicism."—István Deák, Columbia University

The Past in Question

Modern Macedonia and the Uncertainties of Nation

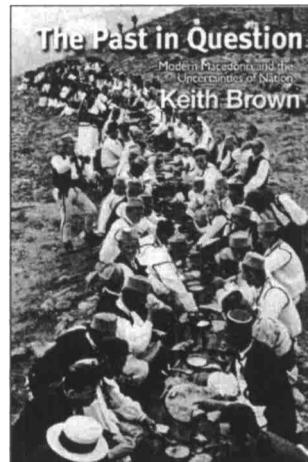

Keith Brown

This book examines the relationship between national history, identity, and politics in twentieth-century Macedonia. It focuses on the reverberating power of events surrounding an armed uprising in August 1903, when a revolutionary organization challenged the forces of the Ottoman Empire by seizing control of the mountain town of Krusevo.

Keith Brown examines how Krusevo's residents, refugees, and exiles have participated—along with scholars, journalists, artists, bureaucrats, and politicians—in a conversation about their vexed past.

THE REHABILITATION OF FREUD / BAKHTIN AND OTHERS Two Novellas

Victor Beilis
 Translated by Richard B. Grose
 "Fresh and intriguing, these stories, in Richard Grose's charming translation, explore ideas we thought we knew. Freud was a revelation in the Soviet Russia of the 1980s. Beilis, poking with his late 20th-century sensibility at ideas our culture absorbed in a different age, lends them a new urgency."

APPROACHES TO TEACHING WORLD LITERATURE

APPROACHES TO TEACHING TOLSTOY'S

Anna Karenina

Liza Knapp and Amy Mandelker, eds.

NEW TITLE

"The essays reflect an awareness of the latest research on the novel, and the range of topics and list of contributors are impressive. Those less familiar with Russian literature or with Tolstoy will find something new on virtually every page, but even Russian specialists will find inspiration from many of the essays."

— BARRY SCHERR, DARTMOUTH COLLEGE

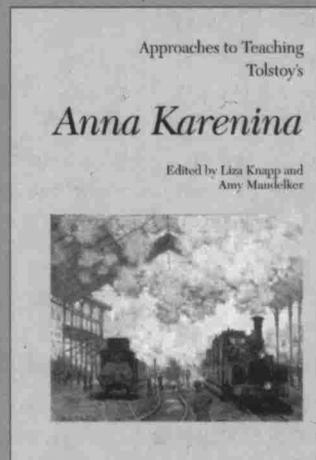

Anna Karenina is probably the most often taught nineteenth-century Russian novel in the American academy. Teachers have found that including this virtuoso work of art on a syllabus reaps many rewards and stirs up heated classroom discussion—on sex and sexuality, dysfunction in the family, gender roles, society's hypocrisy and cruelty. But translation and transliteration problems, the peculiarity of Russian names and terms, and the unfamiliarity of Russian geography and history present a range of pedagogical challenges.

The Donald W. Treadgold Papers

In Russian, East European, and Central Asian Studies

The following issues of The Donald W. Treadgold Papers are now available (international orders add $1.00, WA residents add 8.8% sales tax):

No. 35 The Land Question in Ukraine and Russia

Stephen K. Wegren ($7.50)

In the Soviet period, Ukraine and Russia had similar agricultural systems. During the 1990s, however, the two diverged as Russia pursued neo-liberal reforms while Ukraine maintained the Soviet system of agriculture. With new agrarian reforms introduced in Ukraine in late 1999 and into 2000, Ukraine may pass Russia although significant obstacles remain.

No. 37 Regionalism in Russia's Foreign Policy in the 1990's: A Case of "Reversed Anarchy"

Mikhail Alexseev ($7.50)

Post-Soviet Russia has faced a condition of "reversed anarchy." This explains why policymakers viewed international interactions of the Federation's constituent regions and republics through the prism of the security dilemma, discounting opportunities for economic development in the borderlands. As a consequence, Russia's foreign policy and national security concepts of the late 1990s failed to articulate a proactive strategy for integrating Russian regions into the world economy.

No. 36 Russian Regionalism: The Economic Dimension

Steven Rosefielde, et al. ($7.50)

The authors analyze various factors (including rates of foreign direct investment, exports, dollar receipts) to document the failure of Russia's regions to competitively integrate themselves into the global economic system since the collapse of the Soviet Union. At the same time, they illuminate the systemic causes of Russia's insularity and the ties between Moscow and its regions.

No. 38 Macedonia's Child-Grandfathers: The Transnational Politics of Memory, Exile, and Return, 1948-1998

Keith Brown ($7.50)

In 1948, 28,000 children left Northern Greece as refugees during a brutal civil war. In this paper Brown traces the role of these "child refugees" —as victims of the Cold War, as objects of nationalist ideology, and as political actors in their own right—in modern Macedonian history.

TRONDHEIM STUDIES ON EAST EUROPEAN CULTURES AND SOCIETIES

FRAGILE DEMOCRACIES

A Study of Institutional Consolidation in Six Eastern and Central European Democracies, 1989-1997

Frode Overland

This study analyses democratic consolidation from an institutional point of view in six Eastern and Central European democracies between 1989 and 1997. Dealing with both the consolidation process as such and the dynamics of institution building the study seeks to single out the factors that can determine success or failure in the consolidation of institutions in these new democracies.
