

NEW FROM MOHR:

Studies of Issues Surrounding Paul and the Reformation

Roland Bergmeier

Das Gesetz im Römerbrief und andere Studien zum Neuen Testament

This new approach to understanding Paul on law focuses on the question of whether Paul is addressing his words to Jewish Christians or to Gentiles.

Paul and the Mosaic Law

The Third Durham-Research Symposium on Earliest Christianity and Judaism (Durham, September 1994). Student edition.

Edited by James D.G. Dunn

From reviews:

"As this volume illustrates so well, the historical and theological issues surrounding Paul's view of the Law are notoriously complex. But it also demonstrates that the 'assured conclusions' of a previous generation have been destroyed without any new 'scholarly consensus' in sight. In doing so, this volume raises afresh the fundamental question of what, for Paul, the significance of the death and resurrection of the Messiah 'under the Law' actually was for the role of the Law itself, not only in the justification and reconciliation of Jews and Gentile in Christ, but also in their continuing life 'in Christ' as believers. May ... such a volume

... lead ... to a renewed dedication to resolve this all-important issue for the meaning of Paul's thought and for the history of Jewish-Christian dialogue." Scott Hafemann in Shofar vol. 16 (1998), p. 125

1996. XI, 368 pages (Wissenschaftliche Untersuchungen zum Neuen Testament 89). ISBN 3-16-146573-3 paper US $ 80.00

Jonathan Strom Orthodoxy and Reform

The Clergy in Seventeenth Century Rostock

More than one hundred years after the introduction of the Reformation, the clergy in Rostock set out to reform the spiritual and moral life of the city and fashion it into a new Zion. Disappointed with the results of the Lutheran Reformation, their reform efforts were less concerned with confessional purity than with the practice of Christian piety. The resulting reform movement in Rostock became one of the most vigorous in 17th century Germany.

1999. 300 pages (est.) (Beiträge zur historischen Theologie 111). ISBN 3-16-147191-1 cloth US $ 92.00 (est.) - October
