Language Testing will provide a forum for the exchange of ideas and information between people working in the fields of first and second language testing and assessment. These will include researchers and practitioners in English as a Foreign Language/English as a Second Language Testing, mother tongue testing, and assessment in child language acquisition and language pathology.

Each issue will contain major articles (including review articles), reviews of tests as well as of books, research reports, and correspondence. The editors are determined that no backlog of articles shall be allowed to develop – the keynote of the journal will be immediacy.

Frequency: The journal will appear twice a year in June and December. The first issue is scheduled for June 1984.

Extent: The average length of each issue will be 128 pages. One volume of two issues will be approximately 256 pages.

Annual subscription: Institutional £25.00 Individual £16.50

The analysis outlined in this monograph is formulated in the context of the major developments in linguistic theory over the past decade stemming from the proposal of the so-called Lexicalist Hypothesis of Chomsky. The most significant product of linguistic research during this period has been the development and expansion of the lexical component and consequent reorganization and reformulation of the rules of the transformational-generative model, in which this component has been assigned many of the tasks formerly associated with the syntactic component.

Analytic study setting forth the principles of linguistic sign theory and elaborating a specific theory of meaning in language. Its explication of linguistic sign theory takes as its starting point the approach of Roman Jakobson (1896–1982), a leading figure in the Prague School of Linguistics, and demonstrates how his conceptualization of the linguistic sign thoroughly unifies notions of structure in phonology, morphology, syntax, and semantics.

OUTSTANDING

TITLES IN LANGUAGE

LANGUAGE: AN INTRODUCTION

WINFRED P. LEHMANN, University of Texas

This comprehensive introductory text covers both traditional and generative approaches to linguistics, also treating the history of language and uses of language in society. Special topics embrace recent research in language universals, text linguistics, and semantics.

Phonological Markedness and Distinctive Features

By Arthur Brakel

Establishes a new set of parameters for use in phonological studies of language. In place of the well-known approaches to phonological description, Brakel proposes a new set of nineteen articulatory primes based on a priori semiotic principles.

The Sense of Grammar Language as Semiotic

By Michael Shapiro

Proposes a major reorientation of linguistic theory and a shift in the ultimate goals of the study of language structure. Peircean studies take a giant step forward, moving from a preoccupation with textual exegesis into the battleground of linguistic analysis.

Language Spread

Studies in Diffusion and Social Change

Edited by Robert L. Cooper

Provides a new context in which theories of social change can be tested. Linguists, sociologists, demographers, and political scientists, as well as educators interested in the social context of bilingualism, will find this an informative and substantial treatment of an important phenomenon.

Wine and Conversation

By Adrienne Lehrer

The vocabulary of wine description seems to be limited only by the ingenuity of winetasters. Wine and Conversation is not so much about wine, as how people talk about it. Enologists and wine connoisseurs as well as linguists, psycholinguists, and semanticists will find Wine and Conversation a provocative and fascinating study.

A controversial new study of the origin of language . . .

GLOSSOGENETICS

The Origin and Evolution of Language

edited by

Eric de Grolier, International Social Science Council, Paris

MODELS OF SCIENTIFIC THOUGHT Volume 1

In these Proceedings of the International Transdisciplinary Symposium on Glossogenetics, leading international scholars shed new light on the origin and development of language by addressing four fundamental questions: Did language emerge from one source or many sources? Did spoken language develop only after sign language? How did the relationship between sound and meaning come about? When did transformational syntax evolve?

Though sure to be controversial, Glossogenetics is an important study in an exciting field.

Language in Primates

Perspectives and Implications

Editors: J. de Luce, H. T. Wilder

Cloth DM 64,-; approx. US $ 24.90;
approx. £ 16.00

ISBN 3-540-90798-X

Language in Primates evaluates new results of experiments which seek to teach human sign language to nonhuman primates. Examining the sensitive methodological, conceptual and ethical issues generated by these studies, this book offers a balanced overview of the current debate in the field. Distinguished researchers in psychology, linguistics and philosophy have joined their efforts to create this work. Their multidisciplinary viewpoints provide fresh insights into the interaction between communication language and cognitive capacities of humans and primates.

Concept Development and the Development of Word Meaning

Editors: T. B. Sellen, W. Wannenmacher

1983. 20 figures. XII, 348 pages
Cloth DM 54,-; approx. US $ 21.00;
approx. £ 13.50

ISBN 3-540-12251-6

This volume collects the contributions of a number of researchers who advance the topic of concept and word-meaning development theoretically and methodologically. Linguistic and metalinguistic aspects are discussed as is Piaget's point of view. The development of action words is debated at great length. Two recent approaches to concept development in general and a discussion of word recognition and the acquisition of word knowledge are presented. Research on over- and underextension is evaluated. Theoretical and methodological problems of current research are outlined, and future perspectives offered.

The Sun is Feminine

A Study on Language Acquisition in Bilingual Children

1983. 18 figures. XII, 246 pages
Cloth DM 125,-; approx. US $ 48.50;
approx. £ 31.25

ISBN 3-540-12238-9

This volume is devoted to language acquisition in children who have been exposed to two languages since birth. On the basis of recent results in psycholinguistic research and data on natural speech collected over the course of several years, the author seeks to understand the peculiarities of the language organization process in children who are learning two languages while others are learning only one. Fundamental aspects such as the development of a bilingual lexicon, morphosyntactic structure and interlanguage interference are considered, and a description is given of the strategies used by a bilingual family to promote the children abilities in both languages.

Cloth DM 55,-; approx. US $ 21.40;
approx. £ 13.75

ISBN 3-540-12428-4

This book truly breaks new ground by demonstrating that fundamentally different approaches to prosodic research - building "models" and making "measurements", as the title has it - are mutually supportive in the enterprise of describing and explaining prosody and its role in language and communication.

Dynamic Aspects of Language Processing

Focus and Presupposition

1983. 17 figures. X, 102 pages
Cloth DM 59,-; approx. US $ 22.90;
approx. £ 14.75

ISBN 3-540-12433-0

During the seventies, many analyses of the language comprehension process centered around structural aspects of knowledge representation. In this view, the aim of an utterance is to transmit propositional meaning, and surface structure is of interest only inasmuch as it influences how easy or difficult the propositional meaning is to understand. This book centres around the dynamic aspects of knowledge use and its relationship to sentence structure. The authors assume that sentence structure reflects dynamic aspects of the knowledge base of the speaker and determines dynamic states in that of the listener.

Language Awareness and Learning to Read

Editors: J. Downing, R. Valtin

Cloth DM 89,-; approx. US $ 34.90;
approx. £ 22.25

ISBN 3-540-90890-0

Language Awareness and Learning to Read examines the roles of metacognitive and metalinguistic abilities and their relationships to the acquisition of reading. An international group of experts in psychology, linguistic, psycholinguistic, and education assess current research and offer new ideas on the thinking processes children use and develop in learning to read. This volume reflects the latest innovations in understanding the mental processes involved in speaking and reading, and represents a significant step toward explaining these complex cognitive activities.

Speech and Situation

A Psychological Conception of Situated
Speaking

Translated from the German

by B. A. Jankowski

1983. 6 figures. VIII, 185 pages
Cloth DM 64,-; approx. US $ 24.90;
approx. £ 16.00
ISBN 3-540-12768-2

In this monograph Herrmann presents a new conception of the cognitive features of speech production and their situational determinants. Although a large number of experiments are reported in the book, it is not a mere research report. The heuristic value of Herrmann's theory is illustrated by experimental studies to special research problems in the field of psychology of language, such as naming, level of speech, and directives.

In addition to learning how to articulate sound, attach meanings to words, and utilize grammar, children who are acquiring language for the first time must also perfect a number of complex interactional and communication skills. These skills include learning how to participate in a conversation, tell a story, offer an explanation, answer questions, generally, how to participate in discourse. The contributors to this volume approach the development of discourse skills from a number of perspectives, aimed mostly at exploring how communicative development is intertwined with other aspects of language development.

THE LINGUISTICS ASSOCIATION

The Linguistics Association of Great Britain was founded in 1959 to promote the study of linguistics and to provide for its members both a forum for discussion and facilities for co-operation in furtherance of their interest in linguistics. The Association holds annual spring and autumn meetings, at which original papers are presented in plenary sessions and in workshops devoted to special interests.

COMMITTEE MEMBERS

Chairman: Prof. N. V. Smith, Dept. of Phonetics and Linguistics, University College London, Gower Street, London WC1E 6BT.
Hon. Secretary: Dr G. Gazdar, School of Social Sciences, University of Sussex, Falmer, Brighton BN1 9QN.
Membership Secretary: Professor R. Hogg, Dept. of English Language and Literature, University of Manchester, Oxford Road, Manchester M13 9PL.
Meetings Secretary: Dr M. Wheeler, Dept. of Linguistics, University of Liverpool, P.O. Box 147, Liverpool L69 3BX.

Persons interested in linguistics are eligible for election as members, subject to the approval of the Committee. Subscribing members may receive the Journal of Linguistics at the special rate of £10.00 per annum. Application forms for membership may be obtained from the membership Secretary, Professor R. Hogg, Dept. of English Language and Literature, University of Manchester, Oxford Road, Manchester M13 9PL.

Treasurer: Ms C. Cullen, Dept. of Linguistics, University of Hull, Hull HU6 7RX.
Assistant Secretary: Dr R. Coates, School of Social Sciences, University of Sussex, Falmer, Brighton BN1 9QN.
Assistant Meetings Secretary: Dr E. H. Klein, School of English Language and Literature, University of Newcastle upon Tyne, Newcastle upon Tyne NE1 7RU.

BRITISH NATIONAL COMMITTEE FOR LINGUISTICS

The Chairman is Professor John Lyons of Sussex University, and the LAGB representatives are Professor R. B. Le Page of York University and Dr G. Gazdar, School of Social Sciences, University of Sussex, Falmer, Brighton BN1 9QN.
