Energy and the Soviet Bloc

Alliance Politics after Stalin

WILLIAM M. REISINGER

Reisinger explores the complexity that, we now begin to realize, has characterized relations between Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union since the death of Stalin. He concentrates on energy politics to clarify the nature of Soviet–East European dealings and to show how the Soviet Union has operated politically to control the countries of what has been (inaccurately) termed its empire. $34.50

Regulating Privacy

Data Protection and Public Policy in Europe and the United States

COLIN J. BENNETT

Bennett here examines political responses to the data protection issue in four Western democracies. He compares legislation in Britain, West Germany, Sweden, and the United States from the late 1960s to the 1980s to protect citizens from unwanted dissemination of personal information. $39.95 cloth, $16.95 paper

Monetary Sovereignty

The Politics of Central Banking in Western Europe

JOHN B. GOODMAN

In this lucid and informative book, Goodman illuminates both the role of the central banks and the complex politics of monetary policy in Germany, France, and Italy. Cornell Studies in Political Economy. $34.50 cloth, $12.95 paper

The Ideology of the Offensive

Military Decision Making and the Disasters of 1914

JACK SNYDER

“A penetrating account, filled with valuable theoretical insights, of the military planning in France, Germany, and Russia on the eve of the First World War. . . . Snyder is superb in detailing Russian war planning in this era, providing the best account in English on this topic.”

The Political Economy of Basic Human Needs

BRUCE E. MOON

Moon here investigates the economic, political, and social causes of differential living standards among the world's poor through a statistical study of 120 nations. $45.00 cloth, $14.95 paper

Administrative Law in a Global Era

ALFRED C. AMAN, JR.

“Aman has produced an important, enriching and exciting study of the intersections of law, politics, power and policy. A splendid achievement.”—Victor G. Rosenblum, Northwestern University School of Law.

Aman here examines how the U.S. public law system has adapted to change and how the regulatory structures and discourses of the past are being transformed by the global realities of the present. $28.95

Rivals beyond Trade

America versus Japan in Global Competition

DENNIS J. ENCARNATION

“This important book explains the asymmetries in U.S.–Japan direct investment and suggests practical policy steps to deal with the problem.”—Joseph Nye, Harvard Center for International Affairs. Cornell Studies in Political Economy. $24.95

Protecting Markets

U.S. Policy and the World Grain Trade

Economic Discrimination and Political Exchange

World Political Economy in the 1930s and 1980s
Kenneth A. Oye

Did bilateral and regional bargaining choke off international commerce and finance in the 1930s and prolong the Great Depression? And is the open world economic system now being placed at risk by explicitly discriminatory practices that erode respect for the GATT, the IMF, and the IBRD? Most political economists would answer in the affirmative, but Kenneth Oye shows how economic discrimination can foster international economic openness by facilitating political exchange.

The Politics of Economic Adjustment

International Constraints,
Distributive Conflicts,
and the State

Edited by Stephan Haggard and Robert R. Kaufman

In the 1980s some developing countries adopted orthodox market-oriented policies in response to international economic crises, others experimented with alternative programs, and still others failed to develop coherent adjustment strategies of any sort. Building on the case studies in Economic Crisis and Policy Choice, edited by Joan M. Nelson, these essays offer comparative analysis of divergent experiences with macroeconomic stabilization and structural adjustment.

Coercive Cooperation

Explaining Multilateral
Economic Sanctions

Lisa L. Martin

When Saddam Hussein's army invaded Kuwait, the United States organized stringent economic sanctions against Iraq. Since unilateral sanctions rarely succeed, "coercive cooperation" was a necessity. This innovative study shows that multilateral sanctions are coercive not only in their pressure on their target but also in their origin: the sanctions themselves frequently result from coercive policies, with one interested state convincing others through threats and promises. To analyze this process, Lisa Martin uses a novel methodology combining game-theoretic models, statistical analysis, and case studies.

Analogies at War

Korea, Munich, Dien Bien Phu, and the Vietnam Decisions of 1965

Yuen Foong Khong

From World War I to Operation Desert Storm, American policymakers have repeatedly invoked the "lessons of history" as they contemplated taking their nation to war. Do these historical analogies actually shape policy, or are they primarily tools of political justification? Yuen Foong Khong argues that leaders use analogies not merely to justify policies but also to perform specific cognitive and information-processing tasks essential to political decision-making. Khong identifies what these tasks are and shows how they can be used to explain the U.S. decision to intervene in Vietnam.

The first realistic, business view of sustainable development

CHANGING COURSE

A GLOBAL BUSINESS PERSPECTIVE ON DEVELOPMENT AND THE ENVIRONMENT

STEPHAN SCHMIDHEINY

WITH THE BUSINESS COUNCIL FOR SUSTAINABLE DEVELOPMENT

Are industry and the environment incompatible? These analyses and case studies by major business leaders show how companies and governments can make ecological imperatives part of the market forces that govern production, investment, and trade.

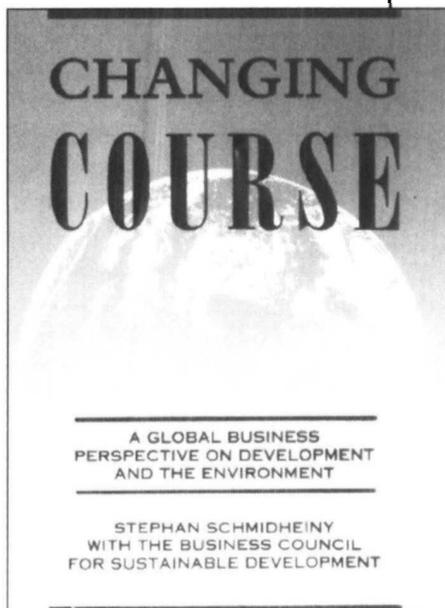

"The question is no longer whether business must change to meet the challenges of the global environment, or even when. The issue of the 1990s is how, and Changing Course lays out the most forward-looking guidelines in print for harnessing the resources of the modern corporation to the task of environmentally sustainable development. This timely book is nothing less than a roadmap to the corporate future."

— James Gustave Speth, President, World Resources Institute

"One of the most important challenges confronting the global community today is to change the mindset with which we view the relationship between the environment and economic development. As Changing Course demonstrates, a growing number of business and government leaders are finding ways to produce simultaneously both economic development and a cleaner, safer environment."

— Michael R. Deland, Chairman, President's Council on Environmental Quality

The Ecologist

*Edward Goldsmith, Nicholas
Hildyard and Peter Bunyard, Editors*

The Ecologist is one of the most relevant, influential, and radical of the international green journals. Founded in 1969, it was one of the first periodicals to recognize the concept of global ecology and to take a stance on the critical environmental issues of the day.

For more than twenty years, The Ecologist has provided a forum for the social and environmental activists who are seeking to change current developmental policies in both the “developing” and the “developed” worlds.
