Call for Manuscript Proposals

Rural Society in a Global Economy

Ohio University Press announces a new rural studies series that will publish manuscripts of high quality about social and economic development issues facing rural people and places. The series seeks original research, synthetic scholarship, or policy analysis. The focus is on scholarship that addresses the circumstances of rural peoples, places, or institutions; appropriate topics range from community and regional studies to international and comparative work and may represent diverse theoretical, methodological, and policy perspectives. The editor welcomes manuscripts in traditional disciplines as well as interdisciplinary works.

Send manuscript proposals to:
