

NOTES ON THE CONTRIBUTORS

ELIZA WILLIS is Associate Professor of Political Science at Grinnell College. She has published articles on state-development banking in Brazil and the politics of decisions on industrial locations in federal states. Her current research analyzes the political processes behind the municipalization of basic health care and primary education in Brazil.

A doctoral candidate in political science at the University of California, San Diego, CHRISTOPHER DA C. B. GARMAN is currently writing his dissertation on the politics of decentralization in Brazil within the sectors of state commercial banking and public-housing finance. He has coauthored an article with Lourdes Sola on the politics of central banking in Brazil since the real was introduced.

STEPHAN HAGGARD is Professor at the Graduate School of International Relations and Pacific Studies, University of California, San Diego. His most recent book, coauthored with Robert Kaufman, is The Political Economy of Democratic Transitions. He is currently working on the political economy of the East Asian economic crisis.

SAMUEL MARTINEZ, Assistant Professor of Anthropology at the University of Connecticut–Storrs, is the author of Peripheral Migrants: Haitians and Dominican Republic Sugar Plantations. His current research focuses on the impact of poverty and other forms of social inequality on the labor and minority rights of Haitian immigrants in the Dominican Republic.

JENNIE PURNELL is Assistant Professor of Political Science at Boston College. Her writing and research focus on rural politics and social movements in nineteenth- and twentieth-century Mexico. Her forthcoming book is entitled Popular Movements and State Formation in Revolutionary Mexico: The Cristeros and Agraristas of Michoacán.

MARSHALL C. EAKIN is Associate Professor of History at Vanderbilt University. He wrote Brazil, the Once and Future Country and British Enterprise in Brazil: The St. John d'el Rey Mining Company and the Morro Velho Gold Mine, 1830–1960.

A Ph.D. in Comparative Literature from the University of Michigan, BEATRIZ URRACA lives in Wallingford, Pennsylvania. She has taught at Swarthmore College and has published several articles on nineteenth- and twentieth-century Latin American and U.S. literatures.

THOMAS WHIGHAM is Associate Professor of History at the University of Georgia. The author of The Politics of River Trade: Tradition and Development in the Upper Plata, 1780–1870, he is currently working on a comprehensive history of the Paraguayan War.

BARBARA POTTHAST is Professor of Iberian and Latin American History at the University of Bielefeld. Her main research interests are families and women in Paraguay, topics on which she has published extensively.

NANCY MORRIS teaches in the Department of Broadcasting, Telecommunications, and Mass Media at Temple University. She is the author of Puerto Rico: Culture, Politics, and Identity.

RIVA BERLEANT-SCHILLER is Professor of Anthropology at the University of Connecticut. Her research on Caribbean topics includes gender, rural economics, land and labor systems, and social organization, past and present. Her articles have appeared in a variety of journals.

DANIEL G. ARCE M. is Associate Professor of Economics at the University of Alabama. His current research interests include game-theoretic aspects of macro-economic policy in Latin America and the effects of arbitrage and market-making in the region. He has published several articles on these topics.

BARRY AMES is Andrew Mellon Professor of Comparative Politics at the University of Pittsburgh. His forthcoming book, Institutions and Politics in Brazil, will be published by the University of Michigan Press.

MARIA LORENA COOK is Assistant Professor at the New York State School of Industrial and Labor Relations, Cornell University. The author of Organizing Dissent: Unions, the State, and the Democratic Teachers' Movement in Mexico, she is currently studying labor-law reforms in several Latin American countries.

PHILIP OXHORN is Associate Professor of Political Science at McGill University. He is the author of Organizing Civil Society: The Popular Sectors and the Struggle for Democracy in Chile and co-editor of What Kind of Democracy? What Kind of Market? His current research looks at the role played by civil society in mediating the social and political effects of economic change in Latin America.