

Tables

1.1	Estimated number of persons identified as Libyan, Syrian, and Yemeni in the host-country	page 20
1.2	Metropolitan areas visited for data collection	22
1.3	Summary of findings	24
3.1	Typology of transnational repression	72
4.1	Libyan groups and organizations converted to the revolution and/or relief during the 2011 Arab Spring, as reported by respondents	116
4.2	Syrian groups and organizations converted to the revolution and relief during the Arab Spring (2011–14), as reported by respondents	120
4.3	Yemeni groups and organizations converted to the revolution and/or relief during the 2011 Arab Spring, as reported by respondents	131
5.1	Typology of diaspora interventions in the Arab Spring	139
5.2	Collective tactics to support rebellion and relief during the Arab Spring	171
6.1	Libyan groups and organizations created for revolution and relief during the 2011 Arab Spring, as reported by respondents	184
6.2	Syrian groups and organizations created for the revolution and relief during the Arab Spring (2011–14), as reported by respondents	189
6.3	Yemeni groups and organizations created for revolution and relief during the 2011 Arab Spring, as reported by respondents	198
A.1	Characteristics of respondents by country of origin	238

