

development related to labor, education and recreation were discussed in relation to birth control programs and the pursuit of a consistent population policy. All sectors can benefit from family planning services, insured group just as much as uninsured ones. Attempts to reduce rates of abortion, morbidity and mortality (especially maternal mortality) are already being made as part of existing family planning programs. Population programs are closely related to other social security services such as family allowances, health care and in some cases, housing projects. The most common system of family allowances provides an equal amount of money to the beneficiary for each new dependent; studies should be made on the relationship—if any—between these family allowances and fertility levels. Should any connection emerge, the system could be modified. The need for demographic consideration to be taken into account in the formulation of social security policies was stressed.

SPECIAL COURSES AND SEMINARS

Indian Affairs in Latin America

Organized by the Movement of Argentine Youth for the United Nations (MAJNU) on the basis of weekly meetings, with the collaboration of professors of the National University of Rosario, Argentina, as well as other specialists in anthropology, sociology, etc. this seminar is open to the general public though primarily directed to the young people who will take part in the work-camp projects which MANJU plans to organize in different Indian communities in the north of Argentina. Its principal aims: to provide information and encourage study of the living conditions of those groups of Indians living in the edge of society, about whom there is little documentation to date; to serve as effective preparation for the direct action to be undertaken in the next working season, providing the necessary technical and practical elements to enable work to be carried out without disturbing the settled patterns of life which must be respected in the Indian communities. The first meeting was held on April 30, 1969 with an introductory address given by the Director of Indian Affairs in Salta Province.

Write: MANJU, Cordoba 1060, Rosario, Argentina.
