Contributors

José Antonio Bowen is President of Goucher College. He taught at Stanford and Georgetown, and was Dean of the Meadows School of the Arts at Southern Methodist University. He has appeared as a musician with Stan Getz, Bobby McFerrin, and others, composed a symphony and music for Hubert Laws and Jerry Garcia. He is the author of Teaching Naked: How Moving Technology out of your College Classroom will Improve Student Learning, which won the Ness Award for Best Book on Higher Education in 2013.

Christopher Bruhn is an assistant professor of music at Denison University, where his research interests have focused on the application of the ideas of William James to musical works, especially those of Charles Ives.

Gregory Camp has been a lecturer in music at the University of Auckland since 2013, where he teaches music history, theory, and musicianship. He was awarded the DPhil by Queen's College, Oxford University in 2012, having studied the performance and reception history of Claudio Monteverdi's operas in the twentieth century. His areas of research specialization include film music and early opera.

Jessica L. Getman is managing editor of the George and Ira Gershwin critical edition at the University of Michigan. She holds two master's degrees from Boston University in historical performance and musicology and a Ph.D. from the University of Michigan with a dissertation on music and social discourse in the original series of Star Trek. Her other areas of study include music production in mid-twentieth-century American television, popular music in science fiction media, and amateur music in media fandom.

John Graziano is Director of Music in Gotham, a database of musical events in New York City, 1862–1875, a National Endowment for the Humanities-funded project. He is a professor emeritus at the City College and Graduate Center, City University of New York, and series editor for A-R Editions' Recent Researches in American Music and Pendragon Press' American Music and Musicians series.

Beth E. Levy is an associate professor of musicology at the University of California Davis. Her book Frontier Figures: American Music and the Mythology of the American West was honored by the Society for American Music, the American Musicological Society, and the PEN Center USA. For twelve years, she wrote program notes for the San Francisco Contemporary Music Players, and her contribution to Aaron Copland and His World won the Irving Lowens Article Award in 2005.

Loren Kajikawa is an assistant professor of ethnomusicology and musicology at the University of Oregon's School of Music and Dance. His main area of research and teaching is American music of the twentieth and twenty-first centuries. His forthcoming book, Sounding Race in Rap Songs (University of California Press), explores the relationship between stylistic change and the production of racial identity in hip hop and rap music.

Benjamin Krakauer is a visiting assistant professor of ethnomusicology at Emory University. He researches Bengali Baul-Fakir music and bluegrass. His article "The Ennobling of a 'Folk Tradition' and the Disempowerment of the Performers: Celebrations and Appropriations of Baul-Fakir Identity in West Bengal" is forthcoming in Ethnomusicology. His banjo playing is featured in productions on Acoustic Disc, CMH Records, and the Fiddle Masters DVD series.

John McCluskey is a Ph.D. candidate in musicology at the University of Kentucky and an adjunct instructor at Transylvania University. He recently gave presentations at the American Musicological Society and Society for Ethnomusicology annual meetings, and is currently working on his dissertation, "Music as Narrative in American College Football," under the direction of Ron Pen, which he expects to complete in 2015.

Tom Perchard is a senior lecturer in popular music at Goldsmiths, University of London. His teaching and research centers on the history and historiography of jazz and popular music. His first book, Lee Morgan: His Life, Music and Culture was the first study of this important mid-century jazz musician. An edited anthology, From Soul to Hip Hop, was published in 2014, and a second monograph, After Django: Making Jazz in Postwar France, in 2015 by the University of Michigan Press. His research articles appear in American Music, Popular Music, Jazz Perspectives, Popular Music and Society, Journal of the Society for American Music, and Popular Music History.

Nancy Yunhwa Rao is an associate professor and chair of music theory and composition at the Mason Gross School of the Arts, Rutgers University. The topics of her publications include American ultramodernism, Chinese contemporary music, gender and music analysis, and composition sketch studies. She was the 2009 recipient of the Lowens Article Award of the Society for American Music for her study "Ruth Crawford's Imprint on Contemporary Music." Her book Spectacular Sound Across Borders: Chinatown Opera Theaters in North America during the 1920s is forthcoming from the University of Illinois Press.

John Spitzer teaches music history at the San Francisco Conservatory of Music. His chief research interests are the history of the orchestra, American song, and the relations between Western and non-Western music. He has published articles on these and related topics, as well as music reviews and articles in newspapers, magazines, handbooks, dictionaries, and encyclopedias. His book on The Birth of the
