The Myth of the Bagre

Jack Goody

This volume presents the text and translations of the most extensive myth to have been recorded in tropical Africa. The LoDagaa of northern Ghana tell the story of the creation of man and his culture and recount his relationship with the creator God and with the beings of the wild who transmitted his culture. The introduction gives an account of the Bagre society and its rituals. 9 plates £9

Chiefship in Western Tanzania

A Political History of the Kimbu

Aylward Shorter

One of the riddles of African history is why chiefdoms proliferate. This critical study of the historical traditions of the Kimbu people reconstructs the processes of formation of chiefdoms in their country. It also sheds light on the history of neighbouring peoples in Western Tanzania who came under the influence of Kimbu political organization and ideas of chiefship.

The Geology of the Sudan Republic

A. J. Whiteman

The Sudan Republic, the largest country in Africa, covers almost a million square miles. This book provides a comprehensive and systematic account of its geology. A scattered literature has been assessed and assembled, together with new data collected since 1960 on surveys and expeditions made largely under the author's direction in the deserts and semi-arid lands of the northern and central Sudan.

Africanus Horton 1835–1883

West African Scientist and Patriot

Christopher Fyfe

This is a biography of Africanus Horton (1835–83), who was an important influence in the development of national consciousness in Ghana. His four medical books and three on political themes ranged over all the issues important in coastal West Africa—political and economic development, education, and race.

Buganda in the Heroic Age

Michael Wright

Much new evidence appears in this history of Buganda at the end of the nineteenth century. The author has taken account of what the people who took part in the political and religious events of this period have to say—essentially an 'inside view'. This has led to a reassessment of many accepted generalizations on the period and the key people in it. 4 plates 3 maps £1.70 OUP Eastern Africa
