Taoism and the Arts of China

Stephen Little

With essays by Kristofer Shipper, Wu Hung, Patricia Ebrey, and Nancy Steinhardt

Taoism and the Arts of China brings together a remarkable collection of art from one of China's most ancient and influential traditions. This opulent book includes more than 150 works of art from as early as the late Zhou dynasty (fifth-third century b.c.) to the Qing dynasty (1644-1911). Many of these works are paintings that show the breathtaking range of style and subject that makes the Taoist heritage so rich. Sculpture, calligraphy, rare books, textiles, and ritual objects are also represented. This volume affords a sweeping view of an artistic terrain that until now has received too little exposure in the West. Its publication constitutes a major advance in Western understanding of this important tradition.

The Life of Buddhism

Frank E. Reynolds and Jason A. Carbine, Editors

"Whereas traditional scholarship has focused on voices of elite groups, philosophies of different sects, and textual ideals, The Life of Buddhism presents a wide range of Buddhist practice in relatively contemporary contexts. The book represents a step forward by emphasizing the iconography, individualized and communal rituals, in addition to diverse practices and devotional expressions of both monastic and lay communities, and will make a significant contribution to the field of both religious studies and Buddhist studies."

Who Are the Jews of India?

Nathan Katz

"Who Are the Jews of India? is the first book to present a readable, interesting, integrated treatment of the three distinct Indian Jewish communities that have evolved—the Cochin Jews, the Bene Israel, and the Baghdadi. It also brings together material on the Baghdadi communities of Bombay, Calcutta, and Southeast Asia in a way that I have never seen before. Its presence is most welcome; its scholarship is superior."

Re-Drawing Boundaries

Work, Household, and Gender in China

Barbara Entwisle and Gail E. Henderson,
Editors

Representing the culmination of more than a decade of empirical research in post-Mao China, this collection of essays explores changes in the nature of work in relation to changes in households, migration patterns, and gender roles during an era of economic reform. The contributors are respected scholars in fields that range from history and anthropology to demography and sociology. $50.00 hardcover, $19.95 paperback

In One's Own Shadow

An Ethnographic Account of the Condition of Post-reform Rural China

Xin Liu

"This study of a Shaanxi village offers a rare glimpse of the everyday politics and gritty struggles in interior Chinese communities, where despite a booming national economy there is still not enough to go around. Xin Liu has given us an unflinching yet sympathetic view of people trapped in a broad national transformation that is not of their own making. The characters and strategies that emerge from this study are important, troubling, unforgettable." —Judith Farquhar, author of Knowing Practice: The Clinical Encounter of Chinese Medicine

Encountering Chinese Networks

Western, Japanese, and Chinese Corporations in China, 1880-1937

Sherman Cochran

Big businesses have faced a persistent dilemma in China since the nineteenth century: how to retain control over corporate hierarchies while adapting to local social networks. Cochran, in the first study to compare Western, Japanese, and Chinese businesses in Chinese history, shows how various businesses have struggled with this issue as they have adjusted to dramatic changes in Chinese society, politics, and foreign affairs. $40.00 hardcover

The Manchurian Myth

Nationalism, Resistance, and Collaboration in Modern China

Rana Mitter

A powerful element in twentieth-century Chinese politics has been the myth of Chinese resistance to Japan's seizure of Manchuria in 1931. Investigating the shifting alliances of key players in that event, Mitter traces the development of the narrative of resistance to the occupation and shows how it became part of China's political consciousness, enduring even today. $45.00 hardcover

Peking

Temples and City Life, 1400-1900

Susan Naquin

Using the city's temples as her point of entry, Naquin carefully excavates Peking's varied public arenas, the city's transformation over five centuries, its human engagements, and its rich cultural imprint. This study shows how modern Beijing's glittering image as China's great and ancient capital came into being and reveals the shifting identities of a much more complex past. $80.00 hardcover

Biography of a City

WILLIAM S. LOGAN

For more than a thousand years, Hanoi has been bending with the wind to resist foreign domination while absorbing foreign influences. Today it teems with competing heritages—it is at once a museum of socialist moments, a masterpiece of French colonial urbanism, and the home of ancient Buddhist temples. William Logan explores the many layers of Hanoi's built environment, from ancient times until the present.

The Origins of the Chosŏn Dynasty

JOHN B. DUNCAN

Drawing on a wealth of data compiled from primary sources, this landmark study shows that a key feature of the establishment of the Chosŏn dynasty (1392-1910) was continuity in the structure and composition of the central ruling class and argues that the main force behind the establishment of the Chosŏn was the need to revamp institutions to protect aristocratic interests.

Beyond Turk and Hindu

Rethinking Religious Identities in Islamicate South Asia

Edited by David Gilmartin and Bruce B. Lawrence

"[Sets] the stage for a rewriting of nearly one-thousand years of history to create new understandings of the nature of cultural encounters. . . . The volume breaks free from the polemics of present-day politics and historicist distortions that have seeped into most standard texts."—David Lelyveld, Cornell University

This collection challenges the popular presumption that Muslims and Hindus are irreconcilably different groups, inevitably conflicting with each other. Invoking a new vocabulary that depicts a neglected substratum of Muslim-Hindu commonality, the contributors demonstrate how Indic and Islamicate world views overlap and often converge in the premodern history of South Asia.

The I Ching in Tokugawa Thought and Culture, by Wai-ming Ng

This study uses the I Ching (Book of Changes) to analyze the role of Chinese learning in the development of thought and culture in Tokugawa Japan (1603-1868).

"This is an ambitious and impressive piece of scholarship. Ng deals with a subject that is rarely taken up in Japanese scholarship and virtually untouched in Western writing about Japan. The result is a landmark study that should provide the basis for publications for years to come."

NEW TRANSLATIONS OF CHINESE CLASSICS

NEW

TAO TE CHING

Lao Tzu

Translated by David Hinton

1-58243-047-0 • 136 pages • $21.00 hc

With the publication of the Tao Te Ching, Counterpoint Press completes its landmark series of translations presenting the four masterworks of ancient Chinese thought, the first time in well over a century that these four books have been translated as a unified series by a single translator. Hinton's award-winning experience translating a wide range of ancient Chinese poets makes these books sing in English as never before. But these new versions are not only inviting and immensely readable, they also apply much-needed consistency to key terms in these texts, lending structural links and philosophical rigor heretofore unavailable in English. This combination of rigor and poetic elegance makes this series ideal for courses on early Chinese culture and thought.

David Hinton, recipient of the Landon Translation Award from the Academy of American Poets, has earned wide acclaim for creating compelling English texts that convey the texture and density of the originals.

Internal Labour Markets in Japan

Kenn N. Ariga, Giorgio Brunello, and Yasushi Ohkusa

Internal Labour Markets in Japan analyzes the employment practices of individual firms in Japan, including wages, training, promotion, transfers and turnovers across firms. It provides a comprehensive account of the Japanese ILM, and provides theoretical models that are applied to empirical analysis using the data on Japanese firms. It also includes a detailed case study of a large Japanese firm, and contains a section that deals with the most recent changes in Japanese ILM after the "bubble" economy boom and subsequent recession. An international comparative perspective is used throughout.

Prostitution and Sexuality in Shanghai

A Social History (1849–1949)

Christian Henriot

Translated by Noel Castelino

Shanghai's nightlife, from the mid-nineteenth century until the victory of the Communist Party in 1949, was dominated by the world of prostitution. Henriot portrays the Chinese sex trade, from the sophisticated life of the courtesan, to the common life of street prostitution. He examines the extent to which these worlds were integral to Chinese social life, commercial trends, and Chinese mores and sexuality. He draws a picture of a sector that was sensitive to economic and social change, and thus a good reflection of Shanghai's changing social structure, societal attitudes, and commercial development.

Music from the Tang Court 7

Some Ancient Connections Explored

Laurence Picken and Noël J. Nickson, Editors

During the two centuries before 841 the Japanese Court borrowed a large amount of secular entertainment music from China. "Tang Music" (Togaku) survives in Japan in a substantial body of manuscripts, but is transformed in character in contemporary performance. This edition transcribes and comments on the music as it survives in its earliest sources and this process has revealed surprising evidence, presented in this seventh volume, for ancient interconnections in music of different cultures.

The Global World of Indian Merchants, 1750–1947

Traders of Sind from Bukhara to Panama

Claude Markovits

Claude Markovits' book charts the development of two merchant communities in the province of Sind from the precolonial period, through colonial conquest and up to independence. Based on previously neglected archival sources, it describes how the communities came to control trading networks throughout the world, throwing light on the nature of these diasporas from South Asia in their interaction with the global economy. This is a sophisticated and accessible book that will appeal to students of South Asia, as well as to colonial historians and economic historians.

The Asian Financial Crisis and the Architecture of Global Finance

Gregory W. Noble and John Ravenhill, Editors

The financial crises across Asia in 1997-98 ignited fierce debate about domestic economic weaknesses and flaws in the international financial system. Some analysts blamed Asian governments for inadequate prudential supervision, widespread failures of corporate governance and even "crony capitalism." Others assailed the inherent instability of global financial markets and what they considered to be hasty and ill-conceived liberalization taken at the behest of western-dominated international financial institutions. In this volume a distinguished group of political scientists, economists, and practitioners examines the political and economic causes and consequences of the crisis.

The Morphology of Chinese

A Linguistic and Cognitive Approach

Jerome L. Packard

This book aims to dispel the myth that Chinese "doesn't have words" but instead "has characters." Jerome Packard challenges the common belief that Chinese has no morphology, demonstrating how analysis of Chinese word formation enhances our understanding of word universals in natural language. His book describes the intimate relationship between words and their components and offers new insights into their evolution. Models are offered for how Chinese words are stored in the mental lexicon and processed in natural speech.

Fu Ssu-nien

A Life in Chinese History and Politics

Fan-sen Wang

Fu Ssu-nien, a scholar, activist, and social critic, was one of the most influential intellectual figures in twentieth-century China. This biography offers the first in-depth examination of his role in intellectual and educational development in modern China. Wang Fan-sen follows Fu's early career as a student activist, his efforts to establish a "modern" historical discipline in China, and his legacy as a founder of modern academe in China. This book, incorporating unpublished material from Fu's personal archives, fills a major gap in the cultural and intellectual history of modern China.

“India’s Prisoner”

A Biography of Edward John Thompson, 1886–1946

Mary Lago

“Thompson is important, far more important I now know after reading the biography than I ever imagined him to be.”—Clinton B. Seely

Edward John Thompson—novelist, poet, journalist, and historian of India—was a liberal advocate for Indian culture and political self-determination at a time when Indian affairs were of little general interest in England. As a friend of Nehru, Gandhi, and other Congress Party leaders, he was an excellent channel for interpreting India to England and England to India. This important biography casts considerable light on Thompson and his struggles with his religion and his relationship with India.

Multiple Identity in Narratives from Village India

PETER GOTTSCHALK

Foreword by WENDY DONIGER

Questioning the conventional depiction of India as a nation divided between religious communities, Gottschalk shows that individuals living in India have multiple identities, some of which cut across religious boundaries. The stories narrated by villagers living in the northern state of Bihar depict everyday social interactions that transcend the simple divide of Hindu and Muslim.
