

Figures

1.1	Redistribution across political geographies – high congruence and low congruence	page 41
2.1	Precolonial polities and historically acephalous regions	54
2.2	Colonial-era dynamics predicting erasure of precolonial legacies	63
3.1	Colonial changes to cantons by cercle and region, 1895–1960	88
4.1	Map of surveyed departments	98
4.2	Difference in means in elite social ties	110
4.3	Evaluations of local government performance	120
4.4	Evaluations of local government performance by family relation	121
4.5	Local government responsibilities (% responses)	122
5.1	Precolonial capitals and discount rate illustration	140
5.2	Effect of institutional congruence on village access to new social services	145
5.3	Effect of alternative explanations on village access to new social services	147
5.4	Trust estimates	149
5.5	Illustration of location-allocation models	152
5.6	Effect of institutional congruence on location-allocation choices	153
5.7	Placebo models – effect of institutional congruence on central-state-allocated goods	153
6.1	Family network relations between village chiefs	166
6.2	Friendship network relations between village chiefs	167
6.3	Network relations between village chiefs and local elected officials	168
6.4	Kebemer public goods delivery	179
6.5	Koungheul public goods delivery	180
6.6	Elite networks in Koumpentoum	185
6.7	Koumpentoum public goods delivery	187

7.1	Effect of institutional congruence on new social service access over time	195
7.2	Basic services over time	197
7.3	Marginal effect of centralization on education and health attainment	198
7.4	Effect of colonial exposure on service access over time	206
7.5	Linear fit between early colonial and subsequent service access	207
7.6	Effect of early investments on later investments	209
7.7	Colonial favoritism on service access over time	212
8.1	Difference of means – DHS data	224
8.2	Difference of means – DHS data, accounting for variation in level of decentralization	228
8.3	Difference in means – Afrobarometer data	230