

GRANTS FOR RESEARCH ON INTERNATIONAL ORGANIZATION

A Program Offered by the Social Science Research Council

In this program initiated in 1963-1964 support is offered to social scientists possessing the Ph.D. or its equivalent for field studies of multilateral processes in international affairs, with emphasis on change in activities of agencies, in relationships between agencies and governments, and in organizational patterns. The committee administering the program will accept proposals for research, for example, on changes over time in objectives and roles of international organizations; new multilateral arrangements for the advancement of common purposes; political or technical interaction between international organizations or between organizations and governments or regional groups; and the experience of organizations in attempting to influence policies of governments in such areas as public health, economic integration, or political development. The committee wishes to encourage comparative studies of relationships and agencies, and research that may contribute to the development of theory; it is also especially interested in research on regional international organizations in Africa, Asia, and Latin America.

Prospective applicants are invited to write to the Social Science Research Council, 230 Park Avenue, New York, New York 10017, by December 1, 1965. Letters should describe the substance and method of the proposed research in some detail. Previous research in the field of international organization is not required of applicants. The committee may invite qualified persons in the United States or abroad to undertake research under this program in order to broaden the range of comparative studies.

Stipends may provide for maintenance in lieu of salary for a year or longer, and for travel and other research expenses. Research may be undertaken in 1966-1967.

Beyond the Nation-State

FUNCTIONALISM AND INTERNATIONAL ORGANIZATION

Ernst B. Haas

How can the normal aims and expectations of nations be related to the process of international integration? What kind of international organization is required to maximize this process? Is the International Labor Organization such an entity? This book—part theory, part model, part case study—explores these questions. Included is a detailed case study of the ILO, inquiring whether it meets the requirements of a “requisite” theory of international organization. $11.50

INTERNATIONAL POLITICAL SCIENCE ABSTRACTS

DOCUMENTATION POLITIQUE
INTERNATIONALE

International Political Science Abstracts is a journal prepared by the International Political Science Association in cooperation with the International Committee for Social Sciences Documentation and with the support of UNESCO. It provides short abstracts (averaging 100-200 words) of the contents of articles appearing in specialized periodicals throughout the world. It also contains abstracts of articles bearing on Political Science which appear in more general periodicals.

Articles published in English will be abstracted in English, and articles in other languages will be abstracted in French.

International Political Science Abstracts is published quarterly in June, September, December, March. The September issue contains abstracts of articles published from January to March, and so on.

The arrangement of the abstracts in each issue is systematic. A detailed subject index is provided in each issue, which is cumulative for each year. Each issue contains approximately 160 pages.

International Organization Prize Award

THE Board of Editors is pleased to announce that a 1965 Prize Award of $300 and publication in International Organization will be offered to further encourage, among authors of 32 years or less, creative writing on the United Nations and international organizational affairs. Manuscripts must be submitted to the editorial office (40 Mt. Vernon Street, Boston, Massachusetts 02108) by March 1, 1965, and must not exceed 30 double-spaced, 8½" by 11", typewritten pages, including footnotes. A curriculum vitae of the author, including the date and place of his birth, must accompany each entry, which should be dated and plainly marked as a manuscript submitted for the Award.

Authors may treat any aspect—political, economic, technical, or legal—of the United Nations, developments pertinent to other intergovernmental agencies, or theoretical aspects of international organization. Selection of a winning manuscript will be made by a committee of three members of the Board of Editors and will be based on:

- (a) its scholarly character,
- (b) its originality,
- (c) its relevance to the field of international organization,
and
- (d) the quality of its style and composition.

The Board reserves the right to make no award if, in its judgment, no manuscript is worthy of receiving the Prize.

NORMAN J. PADELFORD
Chairman, Board of Editors
