

"USPSD provides apt and diverse access to abstracts of the most significant journal articles for political science research in the U.S.

. . . USPSD is designed to contribute dynamic, retrospective bibliographic control, with journals selected from a constellation of fields. The 'Rotated Subject Descriptor Display' . . . efficiently broadens the user's search vocabulary and is augmented by a list of proper names and terms in current usage. The abstracts are eminently readable while packed with elements facilitating further research, and there are distinctive fonts and sharp formatting."

A Unique & Comprehensive Reference Guide for Researchers in the Political & Policy Sciences

The University Center for International Studies, University of Pittsburgh in conjunction with the American Political Science Assn., has created an annual reference publication designed especially for scholars and educators doing research in the social and policy sciences. United States Political Science Documents (USPSD) is a quality reference tool to assist in your search for appropriate literature among the ever-increasing pool of source materials pertaining to your special area of interest. USPSD contains abstracts of articles published in 154 selected U.S. journals as well as a set of five indexes to these documents and a "Rotated Subject Descriptor Display."
