

People in Political Science

Activities

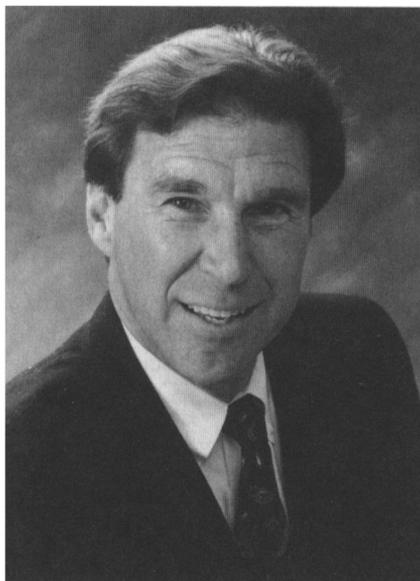

Sheila Croucher, a Ph.D. candidate at the University of Florida, received a University Graduate Student Teaching Award for 1991-92.

Betty Glad, University of South Carolina, was elected President of the International Society of Political Psychology for 1993-94. She will serve as President-elect during 1992-93. In addition to the duties associated with that office, Glad has been selected by the Secretary of State as a member of the newly established Advisory Committee on Historical Diplomatic Documentation, U.S. Department of State.

Betty Glad

Charles W. Kegley, Jr., the Pearce Professor of International Relations at the University of South Carolina, was recently elected President of the International Studies Association for 1993-94. He will serve as President-elect during 1992-93. He was appointed the Pew Faculty Fellow in International Affairs at Harvard for 1992-93.

Charles W. Kegley, Jr.

Lawrence D. Longley, professor of political science, Lawrence University, has been elected to a second term as Democratic National Committeeman from Wisconsin. He was also an automatic unpledged "Super

Lawrence D. Longley

Delegate" at the 1992 Democratic National Convention in New York. Earlier this year, Longley served as a consultant to the House of Representatives Judiciary Committee concerning House procedures should the House need to elect the president and in July he testified before the Senate Judiciary Committee Constitution Subcommittee on electoral college reform.

Condoleezza Rice, professor, Center for International Security and Arms Control at Stanford University, is one of eight nominees approved by the Senate Labor and Human Resource Committee for the National Council on the Humanities, the advisory board for the National Endowment for the Humanities.

Elliot E. Slotnick, associate professor of political science, Ohio State University, was re-elected to the American Judicature Society's Board of Directors.

Edward Thompson, III, associate professor of political science, has been elected chair of the Faculty Senate at California State University, San Marcos.

Administrative Appointments

James R. Alexander, professor of political science, to chairman, Division of Social Sciences, University of Pittsburgh at Johnstown.

Ralph G. Carter, chair, department of political science, Texas Christian University.

Edwin Fogelman, professor, University of Minnesota, has begun another term as chair of the department.

Russ Hanson, associate dean, college of arts and sciences, Indiana University.

Kay Knickrehm, chair, political science department, James Madison University.

Dick W. Olufs, chair, political science department, Pacific Lutheran University.

People in Political Science

Patricia Bayer Richard, dean of University College, Ohio University.

Randall Ripley, acting dean, Ohio State University.

Jean Robinson, interim director, women's studies, Indiana University.

Barbara G. Salmore, associate dean of the college, Drew University.

Lyman Tower Sargent, chair, department of political science, University of Missouri–St. Louis.

William R. Thompson, director of graduate studies, department of political science, Indiana University.

Charles R. Wise, associate dean, School of Public and Environmental Affairs, Indiana University.

New Appointments

Oliver D. Avens, assistant professor of politics, Princeton University.

Arun Agrawal, assistant professor, University of Florida.

Harley Balzer, associate professor of government, department of government, Georgetown University.

Kenneth Bickers, assistant professor, Indiana University; formerly Rice University.

Marijke Breuning, assistant professor, University of Arkansas.

Dana Chabot, assistant professor, Indiana University.

John J. Coleman, assistant professor of political science, University of Wisconsin–Madison; formerly University of Texas at Austin.

Cathy Cohen, lecturer, department of political science, Yale University.

Donald T. Critchlow, chair and professor, department of history, Saint Louis University; formerly University of Notre Dame.

Frederick Cuny, part-time senior associate working on humanitarian issues, Carnegie Endowment.

Craig Emmert, assistant professor, department of political science, Texas Tech University; formerly of the University of Alabama.

Nancy A. Gaffney, administrator and editor, Council of Graduate Schools; formerly administrator for Project Liberty, Harvard University.

Philip Gavitt, director of the Center for Medieval and Renaissance Studies and associate professor in history, Saint Louis University.

Martin Gilens, assistant professor of political science, Yale University.

Morton H. Halperin, senior associate working on the domestic implications of foreign policy, Carnegie Endowment.

Robert T. Huber, vice president, International Research and Exchanges Board; formerly director of Soviet and Successor States Studies Program of the Social Science Research Council.

Paul D. Hutchcroft, assistant professor of political science, University of Wisconsin–Madison; effective August 1993. He is currently an Academy (Kukin) Scholar at Harvard University.

Robert Katzmann, Walsh Professor of Government, department of government, Georgetown University.

Sean Q. Kelly, assistant professor of political science, East Carolina University.

Andrew Koppelman, assistant professor of politics, Princeton University.

Sheldon J. Krys, diplomat-in-residence, George Washington University's Elliott School of International Affairs; former U.S. Ambassador to the Republic of Trinidad and Tobago.

Jeffrey Legro, assistant professor, department of political science, University of Minnesota.

Marc A. Levy, assistant professor of politics and public affairs, department of politics and Woodrow Wilson School, Princeton University.

William E. Lyons, director, James W. Martin School of Public Administration, University of Kentucky.

Bonnie D. Mani, visiting assistant professor of political science, East Carolina University.

Franco Mattei, assistant professor, department of political science, State University of New York at Buffalo; formerly United States Information Service, Embassy of the United States, Rome, Italy.

Stephen McDougal, assistant professor of political science, University of Wisconsin–La Crosse; formerly of Carroll College, Waukesha, Wisconsin.

Marilyn McMorrow, assistant professor of government, department of government, Georgetown University.

Will H. Miller, assistant professor, University of Arkansas.

Mark Neely, John Francis Bannon Chair in History and American Studies, Saint Louis University.

Sylvia Neely, associate professor, department of history, Saint Louis University.

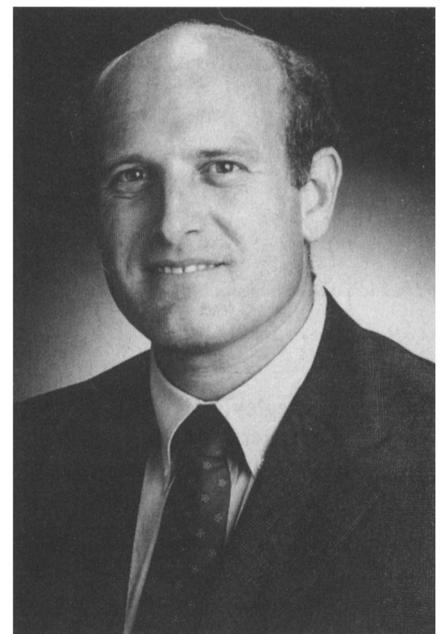

Thomas Nelson, assistant professor, Ohio State University.

Cheol Oh, assistant professor, Arkansas State University.

Demetrios Papademetriou, senior associate working on immigration policy issues, Carnegie Endowment.

Minxin Pei, assistant professor of politics, Princeton University.

James L. Regens has been named the first Freeport McMoran Professor of Environmental Policy at Tulane University; formerly University of Georgia.

James L. Regens

Diana E. Richards, assistant professor, department of political science, University of Minnesota.

J. Philip Rogers, visiting assistant professor, University of Pittsburgh at Johnstown.

Robert Rohrschneider, assistant professor, Indiana University; formerly University of Kentucky.

Michal Rozbicki, assistant professor, department of history, Saint Louis University.

Annamaria Seleny, assistant professor of politics, Princeton University.

Susan Shirk, professor, Graduate School of International Relations and Pacific Studies at the University of California, San Diego, has been named director of the University of California's Institute on Global Conflict and Cooperation.

James M. Snyder, Jr., associate professor of political science, Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Mark Somma, assistant professor, department of political science, Texas Tech University; formerly of the University of Iowa.

Christopher Soper, assistant professor of political science, Pepperdine University; formerly of Yale University.

James H. Stimson, professor, Carlson Chair in American Government, department of political science, University of Minnesota.

Glen Sussman, assistant professor of political science, Old Dominion University; formerly Morningside College.

C. Bradley Thompson, assistant professor, department of history and political science, and staff member, Ashbrook Center for Public Affairs, Ashland University.

Norma Thompson, assistant professor of political science, Yale University.

Jim Twombly, assistant professor, department of political science, State University of New York at Buffalo; formerly State University of New York at Stony Brook.

Maurizio Viroli, assistant professor of government, department of government, Georgetown University.

Deborah Wheeler, visiting assistant professor of politics, Earlham College.

Robert E. Williams, Jr., associate professor of political science, Pepperdine University; formerly of Southwest Missouri State University.

Ernest J. Wilson III, associate professor, department of government and politics, University of Maryland, College Park.

Promotions

John H. Aldrich, chair, department of political science, Duke University.

Kennette M. Benedict, acting director of the Program on Peace and International Cooperation at John D. and Catherine T. MacArthur Foundation, to director.

Jack Bielasiak, professor, department of political science, Indiana University.

John Bokina, professor, University of Texas–Pan American.

Stephen R. Bowers, associate professor of political science, James Madison University.

Lazlo Boyd, vice president for university relations, University of Massachusetts system.

Linda P. Brady, professor of international affairs, Georgia Institute of Technology.

Barbara J. Burt-Way, associate professor with tenure, California State Polytechnic University, Pomona.

Leonard Champney, professor of political science, University of Scranton.

John W. Danford, professor of political science and the Honors Program, University of Houston.

Carlene J. Edie, associate professor with tenure, department of political science, University of Massachusetts, Amherst.

Charles H. Franklin, associate professor of political science, University of Wisconsin–Madison.

Peter M. Haas, associate professor with tenure, department of political science, University of Massachusetts, Amherst.

Barbara Welling Hall, associate professor of politics, with tenure, Earlham College.

David Hedge, University of Florida, awarded tenure.

Paul S. Herrnson, associate professor, department of government and politics, University of Maryland, College Park.

Philip H. Jos, associate professor, College of Charleston.

Kathleen J. Kenny, professor, department of political science, State University of New York College at Oneonta.

Steven G. Koven, associate professor with tenure, department of political science, Iowa State University.

David Kowalewski, associate professor of political science, with tenure, Alfred University.

David L. Lalman, associate professor, department of government and politics, University of Maryland, College Park.

William R. Mangun, professor of political science with tenure, East Carolina University.

Alfreda Jane McCollough, associate professor, College of Charleston.

Albert J. Nelson, associate professor, department of political science, University of Wisconsin–La Crosse.

Curtis G. Reithel, professor, department of political science, University of Wisconsin–La Crosse.

Nathaniel Richmond, associate professor of political science, Utica College of Syracuse University.

Pamela H. Rodgers, associate professor, department of political science, University of Wisconsin–La Crosse.

Ian Shapiro, professor of political science with tenure, Yale University.

G. Sidney Silliman, associate professor with tenure, California State Polytechnic University, Pomona.

Vladimir Tismaneanu, associate professor, department of government and politics, University of Maryland, College Park.

Retirements

James B. Christoph retired August 1992 from Indiana University.

Joseph Hamburger retired July 1992 from Yale University.

Jerome B. King retired from the department of political science effective August 31, 1992.

Eugene J. Meehan, professor emeritus, University of Missouri–St. Louis.

William R. Nelson, chair, political science department and former vice president for academic affairs, James Madison University since 1973, effective August 31, 1992.

Thomas A. Palmer, department of political science, College of Charleston.

John Spanier, professor, University of Florida. For the next five years he will teach on a half-time basis.

Kurt K. Tweraser, associate professor emeritus, University of Arkansas.

Visiting and Temporary Appointments

Kenneth Cosgrove, visiting assistant professor, department of political science, Ohio University.

Richard Cox, professor, political science, State University of New York at Buffalo.

John C. Creed, visiting assistant professor, College of Charleston.

Mark R. Daniels, visiting assistant professor, University of Arkansas.

Robert Darcy, Regents Professor of Political Science and Statistics, Oklahoma State University, will spend the 1993 Hilary and Trinity terms as visiting academic in the political science department, Trinity College, Dublin, Ireland.

Paul Diesing, professor, political science, State University of New York at Buffalo.

David J. Lorenzo, visiting lecturer, University of Arkansas.

Malcolm Mackerras, senior lecturer, department of politics, University College, University of New South Wales and the Australian Defence Force Academy, will spend the fall 1992 semester as visiting professor of political science at Oklahoma State University.

Michael Marsh, senior lecturer, department of political science, Trinity College, Dublin, Ireland, will spend the spring 1993 semester as visiting professor of political science at Oklahoma State University.

Shaul Mishal, visiting professor of political science, Yale University, spring 1993.

Susan O. White, University of New Hampshire, will be a visiting scientist and director of the Law and Social Sciences Program of the National Science Foundation.

Ursula Münch, assistant professor, University of Munich, will teach during the spring 1993 term at the University of Minnesota.

Alan S. Zuckerman, Brown University, will be a visiting professor, department of political science, Tel-Aviv University, for 1992-93.

Award Recipients

1992-93 Woodrow Wilson Center Fellows

The Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars has announced the appointment of 34 Fellows for the academic year 1992-93. Chosen from 773 applicants from 67 countries, they will come to the Center from 10 states and the District of Columbia and 12 nations other than the United States.

The 34 Fellows appointed for 1992-93 are listed here with the titles of the projects they will pursue at the Woodrow Wilson Center.

Sadik J. Al-Azm, professor of modern European philosophy, Damascus University, Syria. "Islamic Fundamentalism Reconsidered."

György Bence, professor of social and moral philosophy, University of Budapest, Hungary. "The Fallacies of Studying Soviet-Style Systems: Why Did We Fail to See the Moment of Failure Coming in Eastern Europe?"

Michael T. Burns, associate professor of history, Mount Holyoke College. "Payments Due: The Paris Peace Conference of 1919 and the Promise of a New World Order."

Charles E. Butterworth, professor of political science, University of Maryland, College Park. "Revelation and Political Philosophy."

Hung-lam Chu, associate research fellow, Academia Sinica, Nan-King, Taipei, Taiwan, Republic of China. "Community Compacts as a Means for the Reproduction of Social Order in China, 14th-17th Centuries."

José Manuel Donoso, novelist, Santiago, Chile. "The Chilean Episode: A Novel."

James V. Feinerman, associate professor of law, Georgetown University. "China's Participation in the International Legal Order."

David H. Flaherty, professor of history and law, University of Western Ontario, Canada. "Privacy and Data Protection in the Private Sector: A Comparative Perspective."

Richard Wightman Fox, professor of history, Boston University. "Gospel of Modernity: Liberal Protestantism and American Culture."

Hermann B. Giliomee, professor of political studies, University of Cape Town, South Africa. "A Comparative Study of the Afrikaners as an Overextended Minority Group."

Richard H. Grove, college lecturer in environmental history, Churchill College, Cambridge University, United Kingdom. "The East India Company, the Indian Medical Service, and Environmental Medicine, 1770-1870."

Pablo Halpern, director of communications, Ministry of Finance, Santiago, Chile. "Public Opinion and Economic Policies During the Transition to Democracy in Chile."

Joseph Hamburger, professor of political and social science, Yale University. "Religion and Mill's On Liberty."

Mohamed Beshir Hamid, associate professor of political science, University of Khartoum, Sudan. "The Challenges of Democratization in Africa: Pluralist Pressures and State Responses."