

Chariot of Fire

Religion and the Beecher Family

Marie Caskey

An intriguing new intellectual biography of one of the most remarkable families in American history. Neither a formal study of theological decline in New England nor a conventional family biography, it provides a thorough and revealing investigation of the relation between religious developments and the psychological complexities of the Beechers. American Apocalypse

Yankee Protestants and the Civil War,

1860–1869

James H. Moorhead

Through an analysis of four major Northern Protestant denominations in the 1860s, Moorhead examines the concept of America as a redeemer nation. He then investigates the churches' use of familiar dogmas—principally that of millennialism—to interpret the experience of the Civil War and Reconstruction. In a final overview of the Gilded Age, he relates the tumultuous events of the 1860s to the tensions and failures of Protestantism in the late nineteenth century. $17.50
