MAX KAMPELMAN Appointed Chairman of Woodrow Wilson Center

Max M. Kampelman, of the law firm Fried, Frank, Harris, Shriver & Kampelman, has been appointed by President Carter to serve as Chairman of the Board of Trustees of the Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars in the Smithsonian Institution. Dr. Kampelman formerly taught on the political science faculties of the University of Minnesota, Benington College, Claremont College, and Howard University. A former Treasurer of the American Political Science Association, he succeeds Hubert H. Humphrey and William J. Baroady, Sr. as Chairman of the Board of the Wilson Center.

PI SIGMA ALPHA Installations

Three new chapters of Pi Sigma Alpha, the National Political Science Honor Society, have recently been installed. They are Iota Omega at Frostburg State College (Maryland); Iota Chi at East Stroudsburg State College (Pennsylvania); and Iota Psi at Spring Hill College.

APPALACHIAN STATE Study In England

Appalachian State University will conduct a 1980 summer study in England program. Students may earn six hours credit, either undergraduate or graduate, in several courses: The English Legal Heritage, The Government and Politics of Great Britain, and Comparative Criminal Justice Systems. The cost of the program is $1,349, which includes round-trip air fare from New York to London, lodging in student-type accommodations in London, breakfast daily, tuition, many side trips and insurance. For further information write to Richter Moore, Department of Political Science/Criminal Justice, Appalachian State University, Boone, North Carolina 28608.

ILLINOIS LEGISLATIVE Staff Internships

The Illinois Legislative Studies Center of Sangamon State University, which conducts the Illinois Legislative Staff Internship Program, has announced the 1980-81 Program. The Program, which begins in October, provides outstanding students an opportunity to pursue graduate studies and research while observing and becoming actively involved with the operations of the Illinois General Assembly. For further information on the program, write to Kent Redfield, Coordinator, Illinois Legislative Staff Internship Program, Sangamon State University, Springfield, Illinois 62708, or telephone (800) 252-853, ext. 6602.

FOREIGN AREA Program Director

A new directory giving information on about 703 institutes and special programs at U.S. and Canadian universities that focuses on the problems, history, and cultures of foreign countries and world regions is available. Foreign Area Programs at North American Universities: A Directory ($22.50) is published by the California Institute of Public Affairs, P.O. Box 10, Claremont, California 91711. The institute is affiliated with The Claremont Colleges.

The book lists the name, address, and phone number of each program; its director; degrees offered, if any; special interests, both topical and geographic; and publications issued. The volume is organized by state and province, and includes a detailed index of programs by world region and country.

Compiled from a questionnaire survey and other sources, the new publication shows that by state, universities in New York have the largest number of foreign area programs (86), followed by those in California (72). Overall, Latin American studies programs are the most numerous, with programs concentrated on Eastern Europe running a close second.

A sizeable number of programs deal with a single country. The USSR, China, Japan, and Canada (there are Canadian studies units on 13 U.S. campuses) lead the list. Others focus on Afghanistan, Bolivia, Brazil, India, Ireland, Italy, Korea, Mexico, the Philippines, Poland, the Ukraine, Vietnam, and Yugoslavia.

Foreign Area Programs at North American Universities: A Directory is designed to continue a series of similar guides issued by the now-defunct World Studies Data Bank and its predecessors, but in much greater detail. (The most recent of the previous guides, "Area Studies on U.S. Campuses," issued in 1974, was preceded by two editions of "Area Studies on U.S. and Canadian Campuses: A Directory," published by the International Council for Educational Development.)

Army War College

VISITING RESEARCH SCHOLAR

The Strategic Studies Institute of the U.S. Army War College seeks an established scholar with a demonstrated list of publications to serve as a visiting research scholar during the 1981-82 academic year. Interest in and knowledge of national security affairs is essential. Applicant should have in mind one or more projects to be addressed during the 12 months period of residence. The visiting scholar may

University of Chicago Commemorates 50th Anniversary of Social Science Research Building and Honors Philip Converse

The University of Chicago commemorated the 50th anniversary of the building of its Social Science Research Building, the first in an American university, on December 18. The commemoration included a series of seminars and discussions involving scholars from many institutions and the awarding of eight honorary degrees to leading social scientists including political scientist Philip E. Converse of the University of Michigan and a former Vice President and Council Member of the American Political Science Association.

Honorary degree recipients at the University of Chicago Social Science Research Building Commemoration. L to R: Philip E. Converse, Professor of Political Science and Program Director of the Survey Research Center, University of Michigan; Clifford Geertz, professor of social sciences, Institute for Advanced Study, Princeton University; Otis Dudley Duncan, professor of sociology, University of Arizona; William S. Vickrey, professor of political economy, Columbia University; Hanna Holborn Gray, President, The University of Chicago; Lawrence Stone, professor of history, Princeton University; Jean-Pierre Vernant, professor at the College de France; Erving Goffman, professor of anthropology and sociology, University of Pennsylvania; and Lee J. Cronback, professor of education, Stanford University.

also be expected to work on directed projects or studies, either independently or as a member of a study group. Security clearance required (if selected) for all SSI members.

SSI is an Army studies group of about 40 professionals, almost equally divided between civilian and military, who prepare studies of issues relating to national security, political-military affairs, foreign areas, and international relations for the Department of Army Staff.

The government will pay a scholar's salary for one year (including summer salary) through the scholar's permanent university. Also, moving costs to and from Carlisle, Pennsylvania will be paid. Complete vita and proposal for research projects must arrive prior to May 15, 1980. Persons interested should write to: Director, Strategic Studies Institute, U.S. Army War College, ATTN: IPA Search Committee, Carlisle Barracks, Pennsylvania 17013.

GREEK POLITICAL THOUGHT

Study Group

An American chapter of the British Political Science Association's Study Group in Greek Political Thought has been established. The Study Group, which has over 100 members in the United Kingdom, Australia, New Zealand, the United States, and Canada, seeks to develop a continuing dialogue among academics from several disciplines interested in classical Greek political thought and practice, and the connections between classical concerns and modern political study. It is expected that an American equivalent to the annual meeting of the British Study Group in London will be established, and permanent channels of scholarly exchange introduced. Interested individuals should contact: Kent F. Moors, Department of Political Science, Newcomb College, Tulane University, New Orleans, Louisiana 70118.

Annual dues are $3.00 (payable in U.S. currency), and should be sent along with a brief biographical description and statement of particular research interests to: Peter Nicholson, Department of Political Theory and Government, University College of Swansea, Singleton Park, Swansea, Wales SA2 8PP, United Kingdom. Dues include subscription to Polis, the Study Group's biannual journal.

HISTORICAL SOCIAL RESEARCH

Journal

A new journal, Historical Social Research, has been started. The quarterly journal is devoted to quantitative historical social research. The editors of the journal will welcome submissions for the publication. Subscriptions: DM 25 for individuals, DM 35 for institutions. Please send orders, requests for a complimentary copy or instructions for authors to: Center for Historical Social Research, Universitätsstrasse 20, D-5000 Koeln 41, West Germany.

FULBRIGHT Alumni Convention

The Third Annual Fulbright Alumni Association Convention will be held on the Berkeley Campus of the University of California on September 4-6, 1980. For further information, please contact Professor W. Goldsmith, Convention Management Chairman, Department of Mechanical Engineering, University of California, Berkeley 94720.

GEORGE WASHINGTON

University Security Policy Program

A new Master of Arts program in Security Policy Studies at George Washington University will provide initial preparation for policy analyst work in the defense/national security field.

Course work includes defense policy analysis focusing on budget and policy issues, national security policy making, international security policy, military history, and science technology and public policy. Students are expected to have minimum competency in economics.

For more information on this 36-credit hour non-thesis program in the School of Public and International Affairs, call (202) 676-6240, or write George Washington University, Washington, D.C. 20052.

Society for the Promotion of

SCIENCE AND SCHOLARSHIP

The publication of books of high academic quality and of educational value is frequently denied because the potential market is too small, according to the Society for the Promotion of Science and Scholarship. This is most likely to be so if the author has not become established in the world of scholarly publications, and if the subject matter of the manuscript is too specialized to interest a commercial publisher, including even university presses. The Society for the Promotion of Science and Scholarship was organized in 1976 as a nonprofit corporation to publish scholarly works of quality which would not be favorably considered by commercial publishers for financial reasons.

The Society, also known as SPOSS INC., will welcome inquiries from authors who are confronted with this problem. The Corporation is tax-exempt and may not require the payment of subsidies by its authors. Although the Society is also not permitted to pay royalties to its authors, it will reimburse them for all or part of the expenses incurred in preparation of manuscripts, doing so if, happily, a surplus is generated from sales.

Inquiries should be directed to The Society for the Promotion of Science and Scholarship (or SPOSS INC.), at 835 Page Mill Road, Suite 10, Palo Alto, California 94304.

SOCIAL SCIENCE Information Service

The International Association for Social Science Information Service and Technology seeks to encourage the establishment of local, regional, and national centers for the collection, maintenance and distribution of statistical databases, and to provide an international forum for the discussion of the policies and problems relating to such information centers. All individuals interested in IASSIST objectives are welcome to attend the upcoming meeting and invited to write IASSIST 1980 Conference, Suite 700, 1990 M Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20036 for registration information. Professionals with recognized expertise in any relevant topic are invited to submit papers to Robert F. Teitel, Chairman of the Program Committee, care of the above address. Dr. Teitel is particularly interested in papers dealing with (1) management and operation of local, regional, national or international data collection; (2) the impact of emerging technologies on the collection, distribution, use and archiving of statistical and textual data; (3) major policy issues facing the collectors, distributors, users and archivists of statistical and textual data.

American FULBRIGHT SCHOLARS

A booklet containing 1979-80 American Fulbright Scholars on University Lecturing and Advanced Research grants abroad is available from the Council for International Exchange of Scholars, 11 Dupont Circle, Suite 300, Washington, D.C. 20036.

WOMEN AND POLITICS Journal

Women and Politics, a quarterly journal devoted entirely to areas of research and policy studies relevant to women and politics, has been initiated. The Editor is Sarah Slavin Schramm, 1979-80 President of the Women's Caucus for Political Science. Dr. Schramm will welcome manuscript submissions for the journal. They should be sent to her at 1265 Beechwood Boulevard, Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania 15206. Subscriptions to the journal at $24 annually are available from the Haworth Press, 149 Fifth Avenue, New York, New York.

INSTITUTE FOR WORLD ORDER Publication

The Institute for World Order has cosponsored the publication of its fifth annual survey, World Military and Social Expenditures. Covering 140 countries, the report was edited by Ruth Leger Sivard and is available for $3.50 for single copies from World Priorities, Box 1003, Leesburg, Virginia 20075. Co-sponsors of the report include the Arms Control Association, the Peace Through Law Education Fund, the Rockefeller Foundation, the Stanley Foundation, the Peace Research Institute, and the British Council of Churches.

RARE Political Science Book Service

Rare and out-of-print books in the history of the social sciences (including political science) are the specialty of FOLKWAYS, Scholarly Books, 5305 McKinley Street, Bethesda, Maryland 20014. Write, stating interests, for free catalogs.

BROOKLYN COLLEGE Studies

Brooklyn College School of Social Science jointly with the East European Section, Center for European Studies, Graduate School CUNY runs a three-year program on "War and Society in East Central Europe during the 18th and 19th Centuries." The first conference was held in March 1978, which discussed special subjects of both centuries. The second conference held on December 3-5, 1979, discussed the 18th century; special sessions also were held on war aims in 1914 and the issue of prisoners of war. Further conferences are scheduled for 1980 and 1981.

Selected papers are to be published in "Brooklyn College Studies on Society in Change," a series of scholarly books, by Brooklyn College Press and distributed by Columbia University Press. The first volume, War and Society in East Central Europe during the 19th and 19th Centuries: Special Subjects and Generalizations will appear in December 1979. In 1980 two additional volumes will be published: Vol. II, War and Society in East Central Europe during the 18th Century; and Vol. III, From Hunyadi to Rakoczi: War and Society in Early Modern Hungary. The general editors are Bela K. Kiraly, CUNY, and Gunther E. Rothenberg, Purdue University. An Editorial Advisory Board is chaired by Robert A. Kann, University of Vienna.

The Program (both the conferences and the publications) is international and interdisciplinary. Attention is focused on the interdependence of political, social, and economic changes and changes in national defense systems and wars in East Central Europe. The similarities, contrasts and mutual effects of warfare in Western and East Central Europe are also studied. The participants belong to the faculties and staffs of universities and other institutions of higher learning of the U.S.A., Canada, U.K., France, Austria, Poland, Hungary, Yugoslavia and Russia. While opportunity is given to young scholars to participate, the program includes the most distinguished authorities of the field. Interested scholars are invited to join.

The Program is funded by various units of CUNY, NEH, IREX, Joint Committee on Eastern Europe of the ACLS and the SSRC.

The Profession

Additional information can be attained by writing to Professor Bela K. Kiraly, Director, Program on Society in Change, Brooklyn College, Brooklyn, New York 11210; (212) 780-5506.

CONGRESS AND PRESIDENCY Center

The College of Public and International Affairs at American University recently announced the establishment of a new research and training institute, the Center for Congressional and Presidential Studies (CCPS). The Center was initiated in response to an increasing need for an integrated teaching, research and study program in Washington, D.C. that focuses on Congress, the Presidency, and their interaction. Programs are being developed for a broad audience, including students, scholars, journalists, public officials, and leaders in private and public organizations. Co-directors of CCPS are Professors James A. Thurber and Jeff Fishel.

Utilizing American University's basic resources—its faculty, programs, and students—CCPS has sponsored several activities since its inception in October, 1979 and is now planning a comprehensive agenda through 1981. The Center's location and structure will enable it to be a dynamic research and training institution focusing on topical as well as long-run issues.

A series of colloquiums and seminars on current issues facing Congress and the Presidency has been the first project undertaken. These monthly colloquiums, which permit area scholars, journalists, and others to meet in both formal and informal circumstances are a continuation of programs begun last year at The Woodrow Wilson Center.

The first two colloquiums featured roundtables on "The Mass Media in Presidential Campaigns" with discussants James Dickinson, national editor of the Washington Star, and Professor Micheal Robinson, Catholic University; "Party Leadership in the U.S. Senate," with remarks by Professor Robert Peabody, Johns Hopkins University, and Martin Tolchin, national political correspondent, New York Times. Two topics planned for early 1980 are "Congressional Oversight of the Intelligence Community," and "Congress and Foreign Policy." The development and distribution of a series of "Working Papers on Congress and the Presidency" is also planned for 1980-81. These papers are designed for both the scholarly community and professionals in public life. Also to begin in 1980 is a $1000 scholarship from the U.S. Steel Foundation for students in the Master of Arts/Master of Public Administration programs who show promise for careers with Congress, interest groups or the executive branch.

Ultimately, the Center is concerned with sponsoring long-term, basic research, and short-term applied research of utility in understanding and assisting Congress and the White House. By exercising a "quick response" capacity, CCPS will be able to assist with special research on oversight, policy analysis, and institutional analysis for congressional committees, presidential commissions, and executive bureaus.

Those who wish more information about the Center for Congressional and Presidential Studies, are urged to contact one of the co-directors, at the College of Public and International Affairs, American University, Massachusetts and Nebraska Avenues, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20016; (202) 686-2378.

EUROPE AND THE WIDER WORLD Book Series

Book-length manuscripts are invited for a new series entitled "Europe and the Wider World," being published by Caratzas Brothers, Publishers, 481 Main Street, New Rochelle, New York 10801. Interdisciplinary in nature and with chronological bounds encompassing ancient through modern ages the series is aimed at describing the historical processes of intercultural relations using Europe as a point of reference. Proposals and inquiries may be addressed to the general editor or one of the editors. Their names, addresses and areas of editorial responsibility are: Professor Deno John Geanakoplos, Yale University, New Haven, Connecticut 06520 (Europe, Byzantium and the Muslim World); Professor Lewis Hanke, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, Massachusetts 01003 (Europe and the Indians of the Western Hemisphere); Professor Donald F. Lach, The University of Chicago, Chicago, Illinois 60637 (Europe, the Far East and Southeast Asia); Professor Cyriac K. Pullapilly (General Editor), St. Mary's College, Notre Dame, Indiana 46556 (Europe and South Asia); Professor Jan Vansina, University of Wisconsin, Madison, Wisconsin 53706 (Europe and Africa).

The first volume in the series, Renaissance East and West, Essays in Cultural Interaction, edited by Cyriac K. Pullapilly, is now available from the publisher.

Journal of ARAB AFFAIRS

The Journal of Arab Affairs is an interdisciplinary journal published twice a year by the Middle East Research Group, Inc. (MERG). The first issue is scheduled for October 1981.

MERG was founded in 1975 in Lincoln, Nebraska. It has since moved its headquarters to Fresno, California. MERG provides educational consulting, publishing and language training to private clients in the United States and the Middle East.

MERG does not solicit nor does it accept funding from any government or political organization; income is derived from three main sources: publications, educational consultancy fees and tuition.

The editor invites contributions on all aspects of Arab affairs, especially the results of recent scholarly research. Manuscripts should be approximately 7500 words in length and should conform closely to A Manual of Style, 12th edition, by the University of Chicago Press. Address articles to the Editor, Journal of Arab Affairs, 2611 No. Fresno Street, Fresno, California 93703.

All other communications including advertising should be addressed to the Journal.

Subscriptions at $15.00 annually for individuals and $25.00 annually for institutions are welcome. They should be sent to the Editor at the address listed above.

URBAN STUDIES Colloquium

The Institute for Urban Studies at the University of Maryland is offering a colloquium this Spring 1980 entitled Fiscal Stress and Public Policy: The Political Economy of Retrenchment and Revitalization. There will be 14 papers by noted authorities on topics ranging from national level causes and solutions to local level responses to fiscal stress. The colloquium meets on Monday afternoons 4:00-6:30 p.m. in Room 1117 Francis Scott Key. All interested persons are invited to attend. For a schedule of speakers or additional information, please call or write: Irene Rubin or Charles Levine, Institute for Urban Studies, Woods Hall, University of Maryland, College Park, Maryland 20742; (301) 454-2174.

MICHIGAN SURVEY RESEARCH Summer Institute

For the 33rd consecutive year, the Survey Research Center of the Institute for Social Research at The University of Michigan will hold a Summer Institute in Survey Research Techniques from June 30, 1980, to August 22, 1980.

The Institute is designed to meet some of the educational and training needs of men and women engaged in business, government research and other statistical work, and also to meet the needs of graduate students and university instructors interested in quantitative research in the social sciences.

For further information concerning specific dates, courses, fees, housing, etc., please write to Helene J. Hitchcock, Administrative Manager, Office of the Director, Survey Research Center, Institute for Social Research, P.O. Box 1248, Ann Arbor, Michigan 48106.

CARL ALBERT Center

The Carl Albert Congressional Research and Studies Center and the Department of Political Science at the University of Oklahoma are initiating the Carl Albert Congressional Studies Program at the Ph.D. level. The program will admit two students each year, up to a total of ten. Each student will receive three years of guaranteed financial support on assistantships, and it is intended to offer to each student a one-year fellowship on Capitol Hill and a dissertation year fellowship. Endowment funds are being sought for this purpose. Each student admitted into the program will be expected to enroll in a sequence of four courses: Political Theory and Representation, Legislative Process and Behavior, Congress in the Political System, and Seminar in Legislative Studies. In addition, students are expected to write their Ph.D. dissertations in some area of congressional studies, broadly defined to include the history, structure, processes, personnel, and policies of the Congress. Students will receive the Ph.D. degree in political science from the University of Oklahoma, and will satisfy the general requirements for this degree in addition to the special requirements of the Carl Albert Program.

The Carl Albert Center was established by the Oklahoma Regents for Higher Education and the Board of Regents of the University of Oklahoma in 1979. It consists of the University of Oklahoma Congressional Archive, currently one of the largest in the nation, numbering the papers of 25 representatives and 12 senators, and academic programs sponsored in cooperation with the Department of Political Science. In addition, the Center sponsors conferences and lectures, and plans to establish a scholarly journal devoted to the study of Congress. The academic staff of the Center is composed of three political scientists, each of whom is a specialist in congressional studies. Inquiries about the Carl Albert Center and its programs may be addressed to: Professor Ronald M. Peters, Jr., Director, The Carl Albert Congressional Research and Studies Center, 630 Parlington Oval, University of Oklahoma, Norman, Oklahoma 73019.

POLICY STUDIES Organization

The Policy Studies Organization is anticipating an especially active year in 1980. There are eight issues of the Policy Studies Journal scheduled for publication. The extra four issues result from special funding, and they are distributed without charge to members and subscribers. The symposia which will be included in the eight issues and the symposia editors are as follows:

1. "Successful Policy Implementation," Dan Mazmanian and Paul Sabatier
2. Non-Symposium Issue, Dorothy James
3. "Regulatory Reform," Mel Dubnick and Alan Gitelson
4. "Analysis of Policy Impact," John Grumm and Steve Wasby
5. "Optimizing Public Policy," Dennis Palumbo
6. "Taxing and Spending Policy," Warren Samuels and Larry Wade
7. "Critical Issues in Health Policy," Ralph Straetz, Marvin Lieberman, and Alice Sardell

8. "Environmental Policy," Dean Mann

The regular issues also include non-symposium articles, literature reviews, and news relevant to the policy studies field. These symposia are funded by such sources as NSF, Department of Commerce, University of Kansas, University of Pittsburgh, and the Rockefeller Foundation. They will also result in expanded book-length versions in the PSO-Lexington series.

In addition to the PSJ journal issues and the PSO-Lexington books, the Policy Studies Organization will in 1980 be adding to its PSO-Sage series of Yearbooks in Politics and Public Policy. These will include Why Policies Succeed or Fail, under the editorship of Helen Ingram and Dean Mann; The Scope of Government: Size, Distribution, and Control in the Public Sector, edited by Robert Lineberry, John Echols, and Valerie Bunce; and Managing Fiscal Stress: Policy Responses, edited by Charles Levine and Irene Rubin. PSO will also publish a Policy Publishers and Associations Directory, which will include entries for policy-relevant journals, book publishers, scholarly associations, and interest groups. Also scheduled for publication is a Social Science Utilization Directory, which contains entries from political scientists, sociologists, economists, and psychologists in government positions, reporting how their social science backgrounds have been and could be relevant to their work.

The Policy Studies Organization is currently headed by Kenneth Dolbeare, with Charles Jones as vice president and president-elect, and Stuart Nagel as secretary-treasurer. Dues are only $10 per year, which covers the quarterly journal, special issues, directories, and one-third discounts on the books. Subscriptions can be obtained from the Policy Studies Organization, 361 Lincoln Hall, University of Illinois, Urbana, Illinois 61801.

MICROCOMPUTERS Projects

CONDUIT, a University of Iowa based organization that reviews, tests, and distributes computer-based instructional materials, is launching two major new projects involving microcomputers.

The first project is funded by the National Science Foundation and will consist of two phases: an 18-month experiment followed by a dissemination period in which both the findings from the experiment and certain of the materials developed will be made widely available. The experiment will compare the instructional effectiveness of some existing computer-based instructional units with counterparts that have been converted to run on microcomputers. The microcomputer versions will be designed to take advantage of features such as graphic displays, color, audio, and various types of input devices. Subject areas for these units are mathematics, physics, chemistry, and biology. Topics in advanced undergraduate instruction will be emphasized. Selected materials developed for the experiment will be distributed through CONDUIT's existing international distribution system.

The second project, supported by the Fund for the Improvement of Postsecondary Education, immediately focuses on the need for dissemination of instructional innovation. Recognizing that the use of computers in education has fallen far short of its potential, CONDUIT will identify and disseminate 35 microcomputer-based instructional modules in a variety of disciplines, including the humanities and social sciences. A principal outcome of the project will be the impact on future development of materials by providing examples, guidelines, and standards formulated during the project.

Both projects are ambitious in scope and will require the cooperation and assistance of many individuals outside the CONDUIT central staff. In particular, authors of microcomputer-based materials are needed. CONDUIT also needs reviewers and test sites. For further information, contact CONDUIT.

CONDUIT began in the early 1970s as a National Science Foundation sponsored project to study the problems of sharing computer-based instructional materials among different institutions. Today, CONDUIT's research and development activities continue, as exemplified by these two new microcomputer projects. In addition, a review and distribution center has evolved, offering nearly 100 different sets of materials for collegiate instruction. Since 1976, when distribution activities began, CONDUIT has delivered over 4,000 instructional units to 600 colleges and universities worldwide.

For further general information contact: Molly Hepler, CONDUIT, P.O. Box 388, Iowa City, Iowa 52244; (319) 353-5789.

CITIZEN PARTICIPATION Magazine

Citizen Participation is a new magazine being published by the Lincoln Filene Center at Tufts University. It is published bimonthly, and it is intended for both practitioners and academics alike. Citizen Participation contains feature articles, interviews, organizational profiles, program analysis, news summaries, and book reviews. Each issue also contains a roundup of current research and available resources in the citizen participation field. For a sample copy or further information, please write to Jeff Berry or Stuart Langton, Lincoln Filene Center for Citizenship and Public Affairs, Tufts University, Medford, Massachusetts 02155.

ICPSR Quantitative Methods Program

The Inter-University Consortium for Political and Social Research Training Program in Quantitative Methods of Social Research is a comprehensive, integrated program of studies in research design, statistics, data analysis, and social methodology. In general, emphasis is focused on those topics in research methodology that are not emphasized in the curricula of most of the social science departments at Consortium-member institutions. Furthermore, the Training Program's instructional environment differs from that of all but a few statistics departments in at least two respects:

- (1) Methods of quantitative analysis are conveyed as part of the broader context of substantive social science research;
- (2) Virtually all instruction is coordinated with and reinforced by active, participatory, data analytic experiences.

The Summer Training Program schedule is partitioned into two four-week sessions with instruction organized in lecture, seminar, and workshop formats. The first session will be held from June 30 until July 25 and the second session will be scheduled from July 28 until August 22.

Program Design

The ICPSR Training Program is partitioned into three instructional tracks that are designed to satisfy the diverse research methodology needs and interests of most college and university faculty and graduate students in the social sciences.

Track I of the Training Program's curriculum consists of three courses:

- Elementary Mathematics for Social Scientists (lecture)
- Introduction to Computing (workshop)
- Introduction to Statistics and Data Analysis I (lecture/workshop)

These courses provide those college and university faculty and research scholars who are attempting to develop or upgrade their quantitative competencies with a basic integrated instructional program designed for that purpose. Next, Track I courses have a service function in the sense that they introduce prerequisite skills to many participants who intend to enroll in the Track II lecture/workshops in Introduction to Statistics and Data Analysis II and Introduction to Linear Models. Finally, these three courses constitute the minimal background for scholars who participate in the lecture/workshop in Quantitative Historical Analysis, the workshop in Quantitative Analysis of Crime and Criminal Justice, and the Empirical Research Issues in Aging workshop.

Track II of the Training Program consists of 13 courses:

- Mathematics for Social Scientists (lecture)
- Data Analysis and Public Policy (lecture)
- Dynamic Analysis (lecture)
- Formal Theories of Social Research (lecture)
- Dynamic Models of Political Economy (lecture)
- Evaluation Research Methodology (lecture/workshop)
- Experimental Studies (lecture/workshop)
- Introduction to Statistics and Data Analysis II (lecture/workshop)
- Introduction to Linear Models (lecture/

- workshop)
- Intermediate Linear Models (lecture/workshop)
- Applied Nonparametric Analysis (lecture/workshop)
- Applied Multivariate Analysis (lecture/workshop)
- Multi-level Analysis (lecture/workshop)

Prerequisites for the lecture/workshops at the Track II level are an elementary college algebra course (e.g., our own Elementary Mathematics for Social Scientists) and a solid introductory course in applied statistics. Participants who enroll in these courses will divide their time between attending lectures and completing structured data analysis projects under the guidance of their instructors and the ICPSR Computer User Services staff.

Track III courses fall into three categories, with descriptive characteristics that are fairly distinct. First are those courses that belong to the curricular core of the training program and will be meaningful only to participants who have satisfied prerequisites from Track II. In some cases, the course content of these courses is on the frontier of the development of social methodology. They are:

- Advanced Linear Models (lecture/workshop)
- Causal Models (lecture/workshop)
- Discrete Multivariate Analysis (lecture/workshop)
- Exploratory Data Analysis (lecture/workshop)
- Models with Unmeasured Variables (lecture/workshop)
- Multivariate Dimensional Analysis (lecture/workshop)
- Time Series Analysis (lecture/workshop)

Second are those courses that are substantive content-specific in the sense that the instructional focus is on the application of quantitative methods of analysis to particular substantive areas rather than on the development of the structure of the research methodologies themselves. These courses are:

- Data Processing and Data Management in the Criminal Justice Field (workshop)
- Empirical Research Issues in Aging (lecture/workshop)
- Quantitative Analysis of Crime and Criminal Justice (lecture/workshop)
- Quantitative Historical Analysis (lecture/workshop)
- Research Issues in Mass Communication

Finally are those short workshops that address many of the common concerns of computing specialists and data librarians:

- Database Management for Complex Data Sets (workshop)
- Data Management, Library Control, and Computer Readable Information (workshop)
- Introduction to Computing with SPSS (workshop)
- Small Computer System Software and Hardware (workshop)

Application and Admission

Admission to the ICPSR Training Program in Quantitative Methods of Social Research is arranged through the ICPSR Official Representatives at Consortium-member institutions. Information about the Program may be obtained directly by writing to: Lynda Pinto-Torres, Administrative Secretary, ICPSR Training Program, P.O. Box 1248, Ann Arbor, Michigan 48106.
