Protest and Power in Black Africa

Edited by

ROBERT I. ROTBERG

Massachusetts Institute of Technology and

ALI A. MAZRUI

Makerere University College

These thirty-four essays, none previously published, span the entire spectrum of African protest against alien rule, from the mid-nineteenth century to the present. The book covers all of the area below the Sahara, and affords many new historical and theoretical insights into the working of African politics. The focus, primarily, is upon rebellions against colonial authority, both overtly violent and subliminal in character, but the volume also deals with the struggle for independence, with post-colonial coups, and with other manifestations of modern social unrest.

“Informative and stimulating . . . It is a very useful collection, indeed, and should have wide readership. . . . these studies give indisputable evidence of the breadth and wide ranging character of African protest during the colonial period.”

— GWENDOLEN M. CARTER, Northwestern University

“A superb collection of original essays.”

TIV ECONOMY

Paul and Laura Bohannan

This work by two distinguished social anthropologists is the distillation of many years of study of a central Nigerian people whose way of life is beginning to emerge into the modern world of marketing and trade.

It examines the effect of colonial society and economy on tribal economy and traces the traditional methods of production, modes of exchange and economic methods of integration, and examines how these may change with the ever widening application of 'development economics' to remote tribal societies in the emerging nations.

It is a work of great importance, not only to specialists but to all those who are interested in the impact of Western society and economics on traditional societies.

AFRICA AND UNITY:

The Evolution of Pan-Africanism

V. Bakpetu Thompson

This is the first major work to attempt full and detailed treatment of the little understood but vitally important international political movement of Pan-Africanism.

Mr Thompson examines the origins of Pan-Africanism in slavery, imperialism and racism and traces its development through to the post independence period following the independence of Ghana in 1957.

The later chapters deal with the conflict between nationalism and Pan-Africanism in independent Africa and discuss the unresolved problems in relation to the future.

AFRICAN POLITICS AND SOCIETY

Basic Issues and Problems of Government and Development

Edited by Irving Leonard Markovitz, Queen's College

Focusing on the dynamics of societies in transition in black Africa, 30 selections discuss the difficulties in creating viable, stable, and progressive governments. They examine the distinct stages of development from pre-colonial greatness to post-independence bureaucracy: the struggle for formal independence, the consolidation of power, and the restructuring of society. Six articles translated from the French give important contemporary work in the social sciences not previously available to most students.

SOCIAL STRATIFICATION IN AFRICA

Edited by Arthur Tuden, and Leonard Plotnicov, both of the University of Pittsburgh

A comparative study, this volume investigates the various types of traditional African stratification—slavery, castes, and social pluralism—and the systems that are emerging as a result of modern change. The intention of this work is to elicit common features from a range of examples so that the generalizations derived may be applied to similar phenomena both within Africa and in societies in other parts of the world. Eleven selections, written by prominent anthropologists and specialists in the given areas, focus on the stratified groups and those ideological, economic, historical, and political factors which played a critical role in strata-formation. The editor's introduction provides a general discussion of the theoretical problems involved in comparative African social stratification.

AFRO-AMERICAN ANTHROPOLOGY

Contemporary Perspectives on Theory and Research

Edited by Norman E. Whitten, Jr., Washington University, and John F. Szwed, University of Pennsylvania

Foreword by Sidney Mintz

Updating black studies in anthropology, this text presents a coherent picture of Afro-America and examines topics ranging from contemporary urban anthropology, ethnoscience, and socioeconomic evolution to musicology, patterning in linguistics, ethnic identity, and syncretic religions. Twenty original articles expand existing knowledge of Afro-America and include material from such areas as Equador, Central America, and Nova Scotia, as well as from the urban ghettos of the U.S.

The Governmental System in Southern Rhodesia

D. J. MURRAY

This book questions the prevailing interpretation of the development of government in Southern Rhodesia. It suggests that the system developed on the basis of competition not between racial but between occupational economic groups. In the light of this analysis there emerges the full significance of recent events. 2 text-figures 80s

Reluctant Rebellion

An Assessment of the 1906-8 Disturbances in Natal

SHULA MARKS

The Natal disturbances of 1906—8 were the last armed uprising of Africans on any scale within South Africa, and the most critical event in Natal's short history. In this study the disturbances are used as a kind of giant spotlight to illuminate the social, economic, and political fabric of society. 4 plates 3 maps 80s

Algeria*The Politics of a Socialist RevolutionDavid and Marina Ottaway

A dramatic account of the first six years of the Algerian socialist revolution. The authors, who lived in Algeria during much of this period (Mr Ottaway was a correspondent for The New York Times and Time magazine), offer a wealth of first-hand information concerning the destruction of the colonial economic and social order, the formation of new power blocs, the attempts of Ahmed Ben Bella to forge a new economy and a modern political system, and the intricate alliances and rivalries among a small group of leaders.

Geographical Regions of NigeriaReuben K. Udo

This book is designed to serve as a reference work for the student or general reader who wants to learn about the land, the climate and vegetation, the people, and the economy of Nigeria. The presentation is in twenty chapters, grouped in three parts which fit the traditional division of the country into three zones—a southern zone or the coastlands of Guinea, a central zone or the middle belt, and a northern zone or the Nigerian Sudan.

Architecture in Northern Ghana*A Study of Forms and FunctionsLabelle PrussinWith an Introduction byWalter Goldschmidt

Mrs Prussin's preoccupation here is with indigenous architectural forms and settlement patterns in northern Ghana. The author argues that, within a given society, there are several constants that determine the creation of physical forms. Such determinants are the natural environment, the way this environment is exploited to provide food and shelter, the social, political, and religious relationships which have evolved in that process of exploitation, and finally, the external historical influences brought to bear upon the indigenously evolved way of life.

Fashoda Reconsidered

The Impact of Domestic Politics on French Policy in Africa, 1893-1898

ROGER GLENN BROWN In the fall of 1898 two crises simultaneously convulsed the French Third Republic: the Dreyfus Affair and the Fashoda Incident. Using this conjunction of crises as a focal point, Dr. Brown draws on new source material to analyze the interaction of domestic and international politics and the processes of French imperialism in Africa. $7.50

African Food Production Systems

Cases and Theory

Edited by PETER F. M. McLOUGHLIN Agriculture dominates every aspect of African life—social, cultural, and political. This interdisciplinary study discusses the major economic and social problems confronting many African countries. Seven case studies—of food production systems, the introduction of the ox-plow, and the economy of a rural town—are introduced by an essay relating theories of development to the African context. $10.00

The Cameroon Federation

Political Integration in a Fragmentary Society

WILLARD R. JOHNSON

The formative years of Africa's only surviving bilingual federation are assessed in this book. The author shows how the 1961 federation of the British and French Cameroons attempted to integrate a highly fragmented society representing every social cleavage found in Africa, including disparate and bilingual colonial legacies. After examining accepted theory on the integration of political systems and the maintenance of the resulting unions, Professor Johnson then applies this theory to the actual experience within the Cameroon Federation. His assessment of the causes, direction, and meaning of political change has relevance not only in Cameroon and other parts of Africa but in societies in general. $12.50

THE JOURNAL OF MODERN AFRICAN STUDIES

The Journal offers a quarterly survey of politics, economics, and related topics in contemporary Africa.

The main emphasis is upon the peoples and policies, the problems and progress of this dynamic and disparate continent; upon the many societies that are evolving rather than the essential characteristics of the old; upon the present, not on the more distant past. The best current work is sought from specialists in different academic disciplines, whose contributions can illuminate and cross-fertilise one another.

The Journal seeks to promote a deeper understanding of what is happening in Africa today. It is intended for both the political scientist and the practical politician, the administrator and the advocate, the economist and the educator, the banker and the businessman, the diplomat and the technocrat, the civil servant and the nationalist leader. All have something to contribute to these pages and, it is hoped, much to learn from them.

Editorial policy avoids commitment to any political viewpoint or ideology, whether imperialism, pan-Africanism, capitalism, socialism, or nationalism. Such concepts, however, have relevance to the modern African situation, and merit serious discussion, often from several different points of view, in order that controversial issues may be fairly examined.
