A dancer takes you into his confidence

As dance captain and long-time soloist for the Murray Louis Dance Company, Michael Ballard speaks freely about what it's like dancing for Louis and Alwin Nikolais, about the personal and artistic changes that occur when a dancer leaves or joins the company, about the grind of touring and the challenge of performing before diverse audiences. Speaking with candor and insight, Michael Ballard tells how he prepares a new work, how he seeks to keep repertory fresh, and what he looks for in class. These lively, spontaneous exchanges with dance writer Kitty Cunningham are full of survival tips for young dancers—and a veteran's joy in his art. "Because it is both sage and sassy, it is highly entertaining; because it details a dancer's outer life and probes his inner experiences, it is also a richly revealing portrait of today's dancer."—Walter Terry, Saturday Review.

"A book that, for me, truly expresses what dance is all about. Reading it, I yearned to be young to start all over again to learn how to dance. I know that its insight into the thought and technique will prove a revelation to beginning students, experienced dancers, and audience members alike."

—Jane Sherman, author of The Drama of Denishawn Dance

RHYTHM IN DRAMA $9.95 cloth;
Kathleen George $4.95 paper

A theater director searches for, and finds, rhythm in drama—in patterns of spoken words, in attitude and gesture, and in all aspects of dramatic production. Kathleen George illustrates her search with brief, perceptive analyses of scenes from familiar plays: OEDIPUS, HAMLET, the works of Chekhov, Ibsen, Beckett, Albee, and Pinter. Her discussion focuses on dramatic action or changes based upon the interaction of the characters, but she is also concerned with how a playwright creates visual rhythms in the instructions for scene and set changes.

Students of drama and theatergoers will enjoy George's spare and engaging prose.

Through a distinguished series of lectures, print and slide presentations, dance instruction and demonstrations, this program offers an in-depth view of the Japanese or Egyptian dance and performing arts.

Course-related activities include field trips to museums and historical sites; meeting with recognized specialists, scholars, artisans and craftsmen; and participant-observation opportunities in individual areas of interest. Thus, students are able to investigate vital connections between dance, religion, history and literature that have so greatly contributed to these cultures.

NYU students may combine the 12 credits earned with their work toward the master's degree in Dance and Dance Education (689B) at New York University. Non-NYU students may, with prior permission from their home institution, transfer the 12pts to their own degree programs.

The School of the Arts Announces a New Program in Dramatic Writing.

Beginning this fall, dramatic writing takes its place along with film, television, and drama as a major course of study in the School of the Arts at New York University.

The dramatic text is enjoying a resurgence of interest. An increasing demand for new writers has encouraged the School to design this specialized curriculum focused on the writer's skills, problems, and opportunities.

A unique advantage for the writer is the closeness of this new program to the School's established programs in performance and production. Participation in production is a vital part of the writing curriculum. Ample opportunity exists to develop works in progress in staged readings and on videotape as well as on the page.

In the School of the Arts tradition, all faculty members are active, working professionals—writers, producers, and editors. Students will also have the benefit of advice, counsel, and criticism from distinguished members of New York's artistic community.

A limited number of students will be accepted in both the Bachelor of Fine Arts and Master of Fine Arts programs. For more information, return the coupon below or call (212) 598-7845.

PERFORMANCE STUDIES

A New Approach To Performance Studies

Theatre changes. So do standards and methods of research, publication, teaching and employment. The Department of Performance Studies, which offers masters and doctoral research exclusively, regularly revises its curriculum to emphasize responsible study of the performing arts. It now offers new courses and concentration in these areas:

DANCE PERFORMANCE

Dance study, in the context of the performing arts, is designed for independent-minded dance scholars concerned to explore new methods of research which deal responsibly with present dance conditions and put the past in a useful perspective. Seminar courses are led by leading dance scholars and critics who organize study and discussion to cover particular figures, movements and periods. The area is expanding to provide increased doctoral concentration. Applicants should write the Chairman for full details and new course offerings.

POPULAR PERFORMANCE

Folk and popular entertainment (including modern media) have constituted a culturally and artistically vital alternative theatre. The need to study such forms is now emphasized by their influence on contemporary performance. This concentration studies the history of traditional forms, the relating of such practice to theatre history, and the place of folk and popular entertainment in contemporary performance.

PERFORMANCE THEORY

Theatre and social science scholars are increasingly concerned with the continuum from human action and ritual to formal performance in all societies. Extensive interdisciplinary study includes field work and theory that relate to concepts of social and theatrical performance, in the dimensions of ritual, public ceremony, and "life events." Courses are planned in the roots of art, liminality, and collective performance methods, as well as workshops in converging techniques of performance and therapy.

PERFORMANCE WRITING AND RESEARCH

Acquired knowledge in performing arts may be published in a variety of media. Research courses cover bibliography, archival documentation, textual study and interview methods, as well as description of performance practice. Applied courses emphasize editorial methods and standards for reviewing, criticism, features, scholarly articles, books and media.

CONTEMPORARY PERFORMANCE

Contemporary theatre has been shaped more significantly through performance theory and practice than through dramatic literature. Courses cover the practice, theory and methods, and institutional structure of contemporary performance in the fullest possible range, including commercial theatre, experimental and alternative theatre, and related study in dance and popular entertainment.

PERFORMING ARTS ARCHIVES

Research in performing arts extends beyond published materials. Archives and collections exist in theatre, dance, film, broadcasting, recording. Folk and popular entertainment require particular research and curatorial techniques, rarely available through graduate study. Professional instruction will be offered in the acquisition, cataloguing, and curatorial maintenance of performing arts collections.

IS OFFERING AN ALTERNATIVE PROGRAM IN:

EXPERIMENTAL THEATRE

The Department of Drama, Undergraduate, which offers a B.F.A. degree in acting, is pleased to announce an alternative program of study with the Experimental Theatre Wing. A limited number of students will have the opportunity to work intimately with leading experimental theatre groups in a two-year program designed for students who have completed two years of foundation work with one of the three professional studios associated with our Department: Stella Adler Conservatory of Acting, Circle in the Square Theatre School, and The Lee Strasberg Theatre Institute. The ETW is also open to students who have studied acting elsewhere and who wish to transfer into our Department. Students in the ETW will work in unique acting, voice and movement workshops taught from the point of view of members from each of the following experimental theatre groups: The Performance Group (best known for explorations of audience participation and environmental theatre), The Ridiculous Theatrical Company (specializing in Commedia dell'arte), Mabou Mines (known for conceptual adaptations of Beckett and experiments with new music and movement), Chi-Kanji and original members of the Open Theater—each known for uniquely experimental approaches to ensemble acting. In addition to studying with the groups, students will be expected to take dramatic literature, theatre history (including studies in the avant-garde), and performance theory courses offered through the Department. The program also includes summer workshops with the Iowa Theater Lab and the Bread and Puppet Theater.

Since the nature of the groups involves frequent international tours, the order and availability of the groups varies each semester. For each year's schedule and further information contact:

Meyerhold at Work

Edited by Paul Schmidt
Translated by Paul Schmidt,
Ilya Levin, and Vern McGee

"Not a mirror but a magnifying glass"—such, in the poet Mayakovsky's words, was the theater of Vsevolod Meyerhold. The first to insist on the primacy of the director's role, indeed the first to conceive of it as a role, this passionately dedicated Russian director tore down the fourth wall and forced the actors and audience together into one inescapable community of experience. Schmidt has assembled journals, letters, reminiscences, and, of special interest, actual rehearsal notes that build a fascinating, intimate picture of Meyerhold as a theorist and as a man.

Script into Performance A STRUCTURALIST VIEW OF PLAY PRODUCTION

By Richard Hornby

Script into Performance mediates the conflict between theater practitioners and proponents of scholarly dramatic criticism. Hornby describes three productions in which his use of a Structuralist method to integrate the differing approaches results in a richer insight into the playscript.

Theatre for the People THE STORY OF THE VOLKSBUHNE

By Cecil W. Davies

This is the first full account in any language of Germany's remarkable Volksbühne, the theatre for working people founded in turn-of-the-century Berlin and still a vital force today.

Theater and Propaganda

By George H. Szanto

Exploring the points at which theater and propaganda meet, Szanto provides a fascinating discussion of the distortion of information that occurs in dramatic literature in its stage, film, and television forms.

What do Cindy Milstead and Colleen Dewhurst have in common?

An exceptional acting talent, for one thing—even though Cindy's name isn't exactly a household word. And an exceptional alma mater: The American Academy of Dramatic Arts.

Both of these women spent two tough, demanding years here, learning every skill it takes to become a true professional: from voice training and body movement to theater history and makeup.

One of them is now famous. The other one isn't—yet. But one thing is certain: both women have found the courage and the determination and the heart to become the best actresses they can possibly be.

If that's your goal, then you belong here too. At The American Academy.
