PROSPECTS

The annual of American Cultural Studies

Editor: Jack Salzman, Center for American Culture Studies, Columbia University

Prospects, the distinguished annual journal published by Cambridge University Press, explores all aspects of American civilization, including literature, film, humor, satire, photography, music, history, art, urban studies, television and sociology. The journal is neither partisan nor restrictive but has as its prime concern the presentation of exceptional works of criticism and scholarship that elucidate the essential nature of the American character.

Prospects is eclectic in approach: its format is free, open, and flexible, and articles vary considerably in length and subject matter. Each issue is illustrated with line drawings, cartoons, photographs, reproductions of paintings and other graphic art that complement and illustrate the essays.

ASA members may subscribe to Prospects at a special reduced rate.

The Social Life of Things

Commodities in Cultural Perspective

Edited by Arjun Appadurai

The essays in this volume suggest that there are complex, but specific, social and political mechanisms that regulate taste, trade, and desire.

Contributors: Arjun Appadurai, Igor Kopytoff, William Davenport, Alfred Gell, Colin Renfrew, Patrick Geary, Brian Spooner, Lee Cassanelli, William Reddy, Christopher Bayly.

Ecological Imperialism

The Biological Expansion of Europe, 900-1900

Alfred W. Crosby

This book is a first step toward the history of the world environment and adds new depth to our understanding the changes wrought by European expansion.

"I commend the book strongly." — William H. McNeill, University of Chicago

Studies in Environment and History

$22.95

Human Territoriality

Its Theory and History

Robert David Sack

This book demonstrates that territoriality for humans is not an instinct, but a powerful and often indispensable geographical strategy used to control people and things by controlling area.

Sack illustrates his theory and history with analysis of the Catholic Church, North American political territorial organization, and the organization of factory, office, and home.

Worlds Apart

The Market and the Theater in Anglo-American Thought, 1550-1750

Jean-Christophe Agnew

Agnew traces the history of our concepts of the marketplace and the theater and the ways in which these concepts are bound together. He illuminates one of the most fascinating chapters in the formation of Anglo-American market culture.

Comparative Studies in Society and History is a forum for presentation and discussion of new research into problems of change and stability that recur in human societies through time or in the contemporary world. It sets up a working alliance between specialists in all branches of the social sciences and humanities. Debate and review articles bring the general reader in touch with current findings and issues.

NOTES FOR CONTRIBUTORS

Contributions may be descriptive, analytical or theoretical. Any article not in itself comparative may be accepted if it lends itself to comment that will place it in comparative perspective. Correspondence with the editors prior to the submission of articles will help to enable them to obtain such comment or a companion study. Emphasis in comparative studies may be either on similarities or, if these are significant enough and call for some recasting of generalizations, on differences. All contributions and editorial correspondence should be sent to the Editors, Comparative Studies in Society and History, Department of History, University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Michigan 48109.

Two copies of each contribution, preferably accompanied by a stamped, addressed envelope, should be submitted. Both text and footnotes should be clearly typed with double spacing and wide margins; footnotes should appear on separate pages at the end of the article. Illustrations may be included by arrangement with the editors.
