USE AND ABUSE OF AMERICA'S NATURAL RESOURCES

41 Books—$1021

Individual books may be purchased separately

Advisory Editor: Stuart Bruchey

Research Associate: Eleanor Bruchey

"I am very much impressed with the collection of books and documents included in Use and Abuse of America's Natural Resources. It is an admirable selection."—Paul W. Gates, Professor Emeritus, Cornell University, Department of History.

This collection provides historical specifics about the depletion of resources that are essential to clarify the current environmental debate. Here are careful studies by scholars, descriptions of historical practices, and warnings of things to come. Special emphasis has been placed upon the legal framework in which alienation occurred, and abundant evidence is presented both of the abuse of laws and the awareness of that abuse that led to protest, efforts at conservation, and legal rectification.

TECHNOLOGY AND SOCIETY

53 Books—$1076

Individual books may be purchased separately.

Advisory Editor: Daniel J. Boorstin

The books brought together by Daniel J. Boorstin in Technology and Society demonstrate the enormous variety of technologies that have influenced and shaped the American experience. These books document the internal development of technologies and vividly illustrate major innovations or revolutions. Included are studies of agriculture, automobiles, textiles, architecture, electricity, metals, paper, tobacco, telephone and telegraph, railroads, business machines, beverages, construction, and public utilities. Also included are biographies of leading figures and general works on the nature of technology and on industrial research.

BIG BUSINESS: ECONOMIC POWER IN A FREE SOCIETY

51 Books—$932

Individual books may be purchased separately.

Advisory Editor: Leon Stein

Editorial Board: Stuart Bruchey and Thomas C. Cochran

Big Business: Economic Power in a Free Society documents the often turbulent and controversial growth of business enterprise as a critical factor in our national life. Emphasis has been given in selecting works to those that describe and analyze economic power in the broad context of public policy and the general welfare, and that illuminate the roles of individual businessmen.

Some of the major areas covered by this collection are: eighteenth and early nineteenth century business and finance, on both a national and regional level; ethical questions of business practices; works by industrial "giants;" social and political aspects of business; arguments for and against trusts; specific industries—steel, oil, railroads, baking; the problems and functions of executives; pricing; business and industry in the twentieth century.

Descriptive brochures on these collections are available on request.

Frederic C. Lane

VENICE

A Maritime Republic

Among the cities men have built, Venice shines supremely as a symbol of beauty, wise government, and innovative economic institutions. Frederic Lane, who has made the history of Venice his life's work, has written the fullest account of the city to be published in half a century. At the center of his narrative Lane places the maritime life of Venice, so crucial in determining its fortunes and aristocratic tradition of liberty. His story extends from the beginnings of the Republic through the 18th century.

Frederic C. Lane is widely regarded as one of the world's foremost authorities on the history of Venice. In this beautifully designed and illustrated volume he shows how that resplendent city shaped its economic, political, and social structure, its rich culture, and the pattern of urban life that made it unique. $17.50, $6.95 paper.

Economic Growth and Social Equity in Developing Countries

Irma Adelman and Cynthia Taft Morris. Based on economic and political data from 74 underdeveloped countries for the period 1957-68, this remarkable study convincingly demonstrates that the economic development programs of the 1950's and 1960's have done nothing to alleviate human misery. Indeed, the initial effect has been to decrease both political participation and the relative share of the poor in the national income. $8.95

Japanese Economic Growth

TREND ACCELERATION IN THE TWENTIETH CENTURY. Kazushi Ohkawa and Henry Rosovsky. This study, which emphasizes the dramatic growth of the Japanese economy since World War II, attempts to fit Japan's experience into a historical growth model of the type familiar to economists. The authors establish the basic pattern of Japan's 20th-century growth and then consider individual aspects of this growth in detail. The book concludes with a look at Japan's economic future. $15.00

The Pattern of the Chinese Past

Mark Elvin. This work examines the evolution of Chinese society from the second century to the nineteenth in terms of the changing patterns in the economics of technology. It deals with three major questions. By what virtue did the Chinese empire remain united when all other historic empires ultimately collapsed? What caused the technical revolution that made 12th-century China the most advanced nation in the world? Why did this flair for technology disappear? $12.50

WAR AND TRADE IN NORTHERN SEAS

Anglo-Scandinavian Economic Relations
in the Mid-Eighteenth Century

H. S. K. KENT

Based on material from English, Danish, Swedish and Norwegian public and private archives, as well as on contemporary and later publications, this book gives a full account of an important section of eighteenth-century international trade. It examines the organization and extent of the legitimate and the smuggling trades, the effect of war and neutrality upon them, and the legal and diplomatic considerations which influenced economic enterprises and policies. Cambridge Studies in Economic History $17.00

PETERBOROUGH ABBEY 1086-1310

A Study in the Land Market

EDMUND KING

Dr. King uses a wide range of source material to examine the character of the land market on the estates of Peterborough Abbey. He deals with the endowment of the monastery and discusses the colonization of new lands, illustrating how they were used to compensate for a decline in income from fixed rents. He also considers the monastery tenants, villein land transactions and the administration and organization of the monastic estates. Cambridge Studies in Economic History $17.50

THE GOLDSMITHS'-KRESS LIBRARY OF ECONOMIC LITERATURE

Resources in the Economic, Social, Business, and Political History of Modern Industrial Society

a publication in microform

Segment 1: Printed Books through 1800 now in process

"In the world of historical scholarship there have been two Meccas to which students of economics have traditionally made pilgrimages: The Goldsmiths' Library of Economic Literature at the University of London, and The Kress Library of Business and Economics at the Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration in Boston. These two superb libraries have stood unrivaled for their collections of scarce early works in the literature of economics and business. In a remarkable undertaking, Research Publications, Inc. is now offering for sale in microform something which, at present, is not available anywhere in the world: the combined pre-1801 holdings of these two libraries. "It is belaboring the painfully obvious to say that no library could possibly hope to build up a comparable collection by book purchases today . . .

"It is difficult to describe the contents of this now-merged collection in short scope. For some subjects the collection is, quite simply, complete. For example, a student of the English contribution to the development of economic thought would have to have very strange interests indeed to have to venture outside of the materials now available in this joint collection. For major works of English economists all the editions will be found here. Perhaps of even greater interest to other scholars are the minor works which this collection now makes available in rich profusion: political pamphlets and broadsides, proclamations, and a wide diversity of business ephemera.

"While the contents of this collection may be fairly described as definitive for many of the specialized interests of the student of economics and business, its resources go far beyond the boundaries of these disciplines. First of all, those people in charge of acquisitions at the two libraries have had catholic tastes, and have given the broadest possible definition of the boundaries of their disciplines. Therefore the collection will be found to be extremely rich in materials on political and social history in particular, and history generally. But, secondly, the period which these materials cover antedates the introduction of modern academic specialization, and individual works seldom fall entirely within the confines of a single academic discipline on the basis of present-day boundary lines. The materials will consequently constitute a major research resource for all social scientists and historians . . ."

THE ECONOMIC HISTORY ASSOCIATION

The Economic History Association was organized in 1940. Its purpose is to encourage research and teaching in the history of economic activity and of economic thought. It seeks to cooperate with societies devoted to the study of agricultural, industrial, and business history. It aims to bring together economists, historians, statisticians, geographers, and others who find that the story of economic change throws light on their field of interest or is enriched by their contribution. Membership is open to all who are interested in the history of economic life in all its phases in the United States and other countries.

THE JOURNAL OF ECONOMIC HISTORY is published for The Economic History Association by the Graduate School of Business Administration of New York University. Correspondence concerning contributions to the JOURNAL should be addressed to the editorial office: Nathan Rosenberg, Department of Economics, University of Wisconsin, Madison, Wisconsin 53706. Applications for membership should be addressed to Herman E. Krooss, Treasurer, in care of New York University, 100 Trinity Place, New York, New York 10006.
