

People in Political Science

Activities

Dan Caldwell, professor of political science at Pepperdine University, was elected president and chairman of the Board of Directors of the Forum for U.S.-Soviet Dialogue, a non-governmental, non-partisan organization that annually sponsors exchanges of mid-career American and Soviet professionals. This year's conference will be held at West Point from July 8-13.

Leon D. Epstein, University of Wisconsin-Madison, was visiting fellow of the Institute for Advanced Studies, Indiana University, during November 1989.

Winand Gellner, Universitat Trier, has been awarded an American Studies Fellowship from the American Council of Learned Societies, to spend nine months at the University of California, Berkeley. He will undertake research in the field of comparative elite culture in the United States and West Germany.

Samuel P. Huntington, Harvard University, presented the fourth biennial Julian J. Rothbaum Distinguished Lectureship in Representative Government, November 1989.

William F. S. Miles, assistant professor, Northeastern University, was guest last summer of The Presidency of Nigeria. He delivered a paper at the Nigeria-Niger Transborder Cooperation Workshop which was coordinated by the National Boundary Commission and held from July 2-8, 1989, at the Bagauda Lake Hotel, Kano.

Jorgen Rasmussen, Iowa State University, was elected as president for 1989-90 of the Iowa Conference of Political Scientists.

Pearl T. Robinson, Tufts University, is the recipient of a fellowship from the Institute for Advanced Study where she is doing work during 1989-90 on neocorporatism in Niger.

Tony Smith, Tufts University, is spending this year at the Center for European Studies at Harvard University. Smith is working on a Twentieth Century Fund sponsored study of "America and the Struggle for Democracy Worldwide."

Michael Suleiman, professor of political science at Kansas State University, received a National Endowment for the Humanities grant to study Arab-Americans.

Mary Ann Tetreault, associate professor of political science, Old Dominion University, received a Fulbright research fellowship to Kuwait, spring 1990. Project title: Kuwait's Oil Companies: Pioneering Organizations in a New World Order.

Bruce Wallin, lecturer at California State University, Fullerton, was a guest scholar at Meiji University in Tokyo for the month of June. Successful in an international competition, he was invited under Meiji's Visiting Scholar Program. Wallin delivered three lectures on fiscal federalism and public finance.

Thomas P. Wolf, Indiana University Southeast, attended a June 1989 Lilly Endowment workshop, Critical Thinking Across the Liberal Arts, at Colorado College. He was also part of a fall 1989 tour of Japan for American, Australian, Indonesian, and Latin American educators sponsored by the Japan Foundation.

Administrative Appointments

John S. Dryzek, chair, department of political science, University of Oregon.

Stuart C. Gilman, formerly professor of public policy and American institutions at the Federal Executive Institute and research associate at the Center for Public Service of the University of Virginia, was recently appointed associate director for education at the United States Office of Government Ethics. Under a mandate from President Bush, Gilman will insure that almost one million executive branch employees receive ethics education yearly. Gilman will continue his academic ties with the University of Southern California-Washington Public Affairs Centers and as a fellow in the Comparative Studies Program of Cornell University.

Susan Hammond has been appointed director of the University Honors Program at American University.

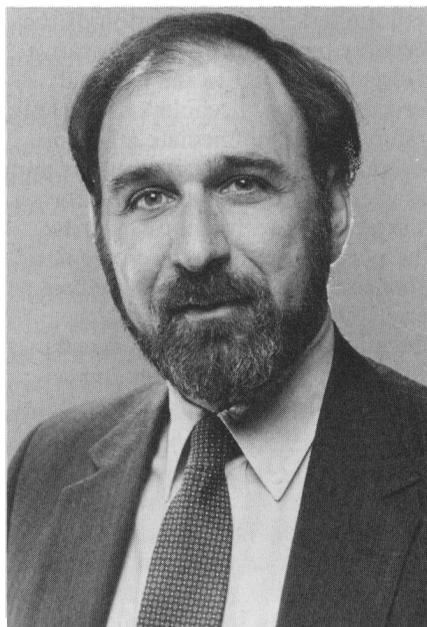

W. Ladd Hollist, Brigham Young University, has been appointed as executive director of the International Studies Association.

Charles E. Jones, associate professor of political science, director of the Institute for the Study of Minority Issues at Old Dominion University.

Cornelius Kerwin has been appointed dean of the School of Public Affairs at American University.

Samuel A. Kirkpatrick, president, University of Texas at San Antonio, effective January 1990; formerly Arizona State University.

Gregory Mahler, professor and chair,

Stuart C. Gilman

department of political science, University of Mississippi, effective January 1, 1990; formerly University of Vermont.

John L. Palmer, dean, Maxwell School of Citizenship and Public Affairs, Syracuse University.

J. Norman Reid was recently appointed Deputy Director for Rural Development, Economic Research Service, U.S. Department of Agriculture. Previously, he was Chief of the Rural Business and Government Branch in the same institution.

William B. Rogers, chair, department of political science, State University College at Cortland, for a three-year term beginning September 1989.

Joanna V. Scott, professor and head, department of political science, Eastern Michigan University, effective January 1990; formerly California State University, Long Beach.

Donald Share, chair, department of politics and government, University of Puget Sound; also promoted to associate professor with tenure.

Stan A. Taylor, chair, department of political science, Brigham Young University.

Louis M. Terrell, chair, department of political science, San Diego State University.

Dennis L. Thompson has been named Associate Academic Vice President-Faculty at Brigham Young University.

Stuart Thorson, chair, department of political science, Maxwell School, Syracuse University.

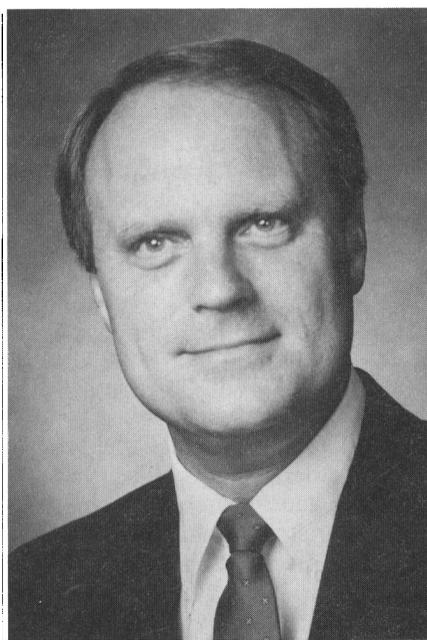

Kenneth D. Wald, chair, department of political science, University of Florida.

New Appointments

Marina Arbetman, instructor of political science, University of Missouri-Columbia; formerly of Vanderbilt University.

Margaret A. Burnham, lecturer, Massachusetts Institute of Technology; an attorney, and former municipal court judge.

Ronald P. Dore, adjunct professor, Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Samuel A. Kirkpatrick
Photo by Rick Mueller

Gavan Duffy, assistant professor, department of political science, Maxwell School, Syracuse University; formerly University of Texas, Austin.

Jean-Claude Garcia-Zamor, professor of public administration at Florida International University; formerly professor of political science at Howard University.

Lily Huan Ming Ling, assistant professor, department of political science, Maxwell School, Syracuse University.

Nancy Lubin, associate professor at Carnegie Mellon University; formerly Congressional Office of Technology Assessment. Lubin has also become the senior staff consultant at the National Academy of Sciences for a study on East/West technology transfer and U.S. export controls.

Karen M. McCurdy, assistant professor of political science, University of Missouri-Columbia; formerly of the University of Wisconsin-Madison.

Daniel N. Nelson, University of Kentucky, will join the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace in January 1990 as a Senior Associate.

J. Thomas Ratchford, associate executive officer for the American Association for the Advancement of Science, will be advisor on policy and international affairs to Allan Bromley, the President's Science Advisor.

John Seery, assistant professor of political science, Tufts University.

David Sousa, assistant professor, University of Puget Sound; University of Minnesota.

Clifford L. Staten, formerly of Southwest Texas State, has been appointed assistant professor at Indiana University Southeast.

Steven Wayne, department of government, Georgetown University; formerly George Washington University.

Promotions

Thad A. Brown, University of Missouri-Columbia, tenure.

Christine Harrington, associate professor with tenure, department of politics, New York University, September 1989.

Lawrence D. Longley, professor, Lawrence University.

Linda K. Richter, professor, Kansas State University.

Charles Stewart III, associate professor, Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Retirement

James V. Elliott, Tufts University, retires as Cornelia Jackson Professor of Political Science, Emeritus.

Visiting and Temporary Appointments

Timothy Amen, visiting associate professor, 1989-91, University of Puget Sound; formerly University of Washington.

Earl Fry of Brigham Young University is visiting professor of political science at University of Montreal during fall semester, 1989.

James Jennings, visiting professor, Massachusetts Institute of Technology; formerly Dean, College of Public and Community Services, University of Massachusetts at Boston.

Art Morin of the University of California at Santa Barbara is visiting assistant professor of political science at Brigham Young University for the 1989-90 academic year.

People in Political Science

George Romoser, University of New Hampshire, was a visiting professor at Kobe University, Japan, 1988-89. He is a visiting professor of government and legal studies, Bowdoin College, spring semester 1990.

David W. Sturrock, visiting instructor of political science, Wittenberg University.

Award Recipients

American Bar Association

The American Bar Association has announced the institutions that received mini-grants for 1989-90 from its Commission on College and University Nonprofessional Legal Studies. The following are political science awardees.

Jamestown Community College, Jamestown, New York. $1,200 for "Comparative Legal Studies: Canada, the United States, and Individual Rights." Project Director: Gregory Rabb, Political Science.

Native American Educational Services College, Chicago, Illinois. $1,000 for "American Indian Religious Freedom and the Law." Project Director: Anne Straus, Community Studies.

Purdue University (Public Affairs Video Archives), Lafayette, Indiana. $900 for "Understanding the Legal Process through the Words of Supreme Court Justices." Project Director: Robert Browning, Political Science.

Applications for the 1990-91 program are available from: John Paul Ryan, Staff Director, American Bar Association, Commission on College and University Nonprofessional Legal Studies, 750 North Lake Shore Drive, Chicago, IL 60611. Phone: (312) 988-5725. The deadline is March 1990.

1989-90 American Fulbright Scholars

Each year about 1,000 Americans are awarded Fulbright grants to lecture or conduct research abroad. About 60% of the awards are for university lecturing, and many include opportunities for research.

The following scholars were chosen in the fields of political science and public administration. Each entry includes name of the grantee, academic rank, home institution, grant activity, host institution and country, and grant duration. There is also a listing of political scientists in special programs.

POLITICAL SCIENCE

Robert B. Albritton, associate professor, department of political science, Northern Illinois University. Lecturing and research on social science research methods. Prince of Songkla University, Pattani, Thailand. Five months, July 1989-January 1990.

Bruce Michael Bagley, associate professor, graduate school of international studies, University of Miami. Lecturing on Andean comparative politics. Latin American Faculty of the Social Sciences, Quito, Ecuador. Two months, June-August 1989.

W. Lance Bennett, professor, department of political science, University of Washington. Research on comparative political cultures and rhetorical structures: United States and Sweden. Swedish Institute of North American Studies, University of Uppsala, Uppsala, Sweden. Four months, between September 1989-June 1990.

Paul Joseph Best, professor, department of political science, Southern Connecticut State University. Research on the Lemko-Rusyns in the 20th century. Jagiellonian University of Krakow, Krakow, Poland. Two months, between September-November 1989.

James W. Bjorkman, associate professor, department of preventive medicine, University of Wisconsin-Madison. Lecturing in political science and public administration. American Studies Research Center, Hyderabad, India. Twelve months, September 1989-September 1990.

Jan Knippers Black, research professor, division of public administration, University of New Mexico. Lecturing on democracy, populism, and ways of participation. University of Cuyo, Mendoza, Argentina. One week, November 1989.

Henry Frank Carey, doctoral candidate, department of political science, Columbia University. Lecturing in political science. Central American University, Managua, Nicaragua. Twelve months, July 1989-July 1990.

Pamela Constable, foreign correspondent, foreign news department, Boston Globe Newspaper. Research on Pinochet's Chile: Dictatorship in a democracy. Santiago, Chile. Six months, March-September 1989 (American Republics Research Program).

Edward M. Dew, professor, department of political science, Fairfield University. Research on revolution and restoration in Suriname. University of Suriname, Paramaribo, Suriname. Six months, April-October 1990 (American Republics Research Program).

Stephen E. Frantzich, professor, department of political science, U.S. Naval Academy. Lecturing on comparative parliamentary applications of information technology. University of Copenhagen, Copenhagen, Denmark. Four months, July-December 1989.

William L. Furlong, professor, department of political science, Utah State University. Lecturing on U.S.-Latin American politics. University of Costa Rica, San Jose, Costa Rica. Four months, March-July 1989.

Arthur Benjamin Gunlicks, professor, department of political science, University of Richmond. Research on the Lander in the German federal system. Research Institute, Speyer, Federal Republic of Germany. Three months, February-April 1990.

Fred R. Harris, professor, department of political science, University of New Mexico. Lecturing on democracy and modern parliament. Fulbright Commission, Montevideo, Uruguay. One week, June 1989.

Alex Roberto Hybel, assistant professor, department of international relations, University of Southern California. Lecturing on political theories of international politics. University of Republic, Montevideo, Uruguay. One month, June-August 1989.