The Socio-economic Impact in Latin America

Women In Decision-Making: Case study on Costa Rica

Nations have expressed their concern, there have been conventions, declarations and even commissions set up, but information still suggest that women have virtually been excluded from the formulation of and influence on the foreign policy of their own countries. In an effort to ascertain the participation of women in decision-making on peace and disarmament, the Division on the Status of Women, of the Centre for Social Development and Humanitarian Affairs, conducted research in Costa Rica; this is their findings.

Textile Workers in Brazil and Argentina A Study of the Interrelationships between Work and Households

The policy implications arising from the studies presented in this book ask policy makers to take a second look at how new technologies affect the quality of work and life and to reconsider the way labour statistics are gathered, classified and utilized. This report investigates how structural changes in industrialization in developing countries influence changes in relationships within households. Using life-histories for a 20 year period, enabled the recording of micro-changes in the level and management of household income, distribution of chores and attitudes towards fertility and sexuality.

Socio-economic Development and Fertility Decline

This is an investigative report of the socio-economic impact on fertility decline. Following meticulous research in Colombia, Costa Rica, Sri Lanka and Tunisia, a comparative analysis is presented, focusing on the cost of contraceptive regulation, number of children desired and components of surviving potential family size. The three stages of the Easterlin-Cummins framework used is discussed in detail.

Slaves, Peasants, and Rebels Reconsidering Brazilian Slavery Stuart B. Schwartz

Slaves were not independent historical actors able to mold their own destiny, but masters were limited, too, sometimes by the actions and attitudes of the slaves. Schwartz reconsiders the themes of work, resistance, kinship, and the relationship of slavery and peasantry. New insights are provided on the shifting power relationship between slaves and masters that constantly shaped the contours of Brazilian society. $32.50

Popular Voices in Latin American Catholicism

Daniel H. Levine

Throughout Latin America, observers and activists have found in religion a promise of deep and long-lasting democratization. But for religion to change culture and politics, religion itself must change. Combining rich interviews and community studies in Venezuela and Colombia with analysis of broad ideological and institutional transformations, Daniel Levine examines how religious and cultural change begins and what gives it substance and lasting impact.

The Politics of Economic Adjustment

International Constraints, Distributive Conflicts, and the State
Edited by Stephan Haggard and Robert R. Kaufman

In the 1980s some developing countries adopted orthodox market-oriented policies in response to international economic crises, others experimented with alternative programs, and still others failed to develop coherent adjustment strategies of any sort. Building on the case studies in Economic Crisis and Policy Choice, edited by Joan M. Nelson, these essays offer comparative analysis of divergent experiences with macroeconomic stabilization and structural adjustment.

The United States and the Origins of the Cuban Revolution

An Empire of Liberty in an Age of National Liberation

Jules R. Benjamin

Jules Benjamin argues convincingly that modern conflicts between Cuba and the United States stem from a long history of U.S. hegemony and Cuban resistance. He shows what difficulties the smaller country encountered because of U.S. efforts first to make it part of an "empire of liberty" and later to dominate it by economic methods, and he analyzes the kind of misreading of ardent nationalism that continues to plague U.S. policymaking.

"An original and incisive study on the nature of hegemony . . . emphasizing the tension between U.S. efforts to 'Americanize' and modernize the island and Cuban resentment of U.S. influence and interference."—Foreign Affairs

Megalopolis Contemporary Cultural Sensibilities

CELESTE OLALQUIAGA

"Cyborgs, bodysnatchers, snuff films, junk art, 14th Street religious kitsch—Olalquiaga's micro readings deliver what the theory of postmodernism all too often merely promised."—ANDREAS HUYSEN, Columbia University
