EDITORIAL POLICY

The British Journal of Political Science is an independent journal, whose policy is set by its editorial board. It is committed to no methodological orthodoxy over and above the normal canons of scholarship: clear and consistent use of words, logical and mathematical validity, and the use of appropriate evidence to substantiate empirical statements. Contributions are invited in all fields of political science, including political philosophy and political sociology. Work addressed to problems of general significance to students of politics will be published whatever the period(s) or place(s) drawn upon for evidence.

The individuals rate applies only to individuals ordering direct from the Press and certifying that the Journal is for their personal use.

Democracy and Disobedience

P. A. D. Singer

Why, or in what circumstances, ought we to obey the law? Anyone seeking a dispassionate answer to this question should be able to follow the argument of this book. It centres on the common view that disobedience to the law, while often justifiable in a dictatorship, is difficult to justify in a democracy. The author develops a distinctive theory of political obligation in an ideal society, and concludes that Western democracies fall short of it in crucial respects. £2 paper covers 90p

The Bases of International Order

Essays in Honour of C. A. W. Manning

Edited by Alan James

States are engaged in complex relations with each other and must continually accommodate themselves to far-reaching changes. This situation depends on a number of arrangements, practices, and understandings, which are in turn an expression of the desire of states to avoid international anarchy. In this book Geoffrey Goodwin, F. S. Northedge, and the late Martin Wight, among others, examine various aspects of states within a basic international order. Frontispiece £3.50

Policy-Making in Secondary Education

A Case Study

Rene Saran

This study of post-1944 educational policy decisions and their administrative implementation by a large urban local authority provides new insights into decision-making in the school system. It will interest students of educational administration, teachers, local government officers, local councillors, and school managers as well as anyone interested in the interaction between professional and lay policy-makers. 2 text figures £4.50

Nazi Propaganda

Z. A. B. Zeman

Hitler's rise to power was amazingly rapid; despite the poverty of Nazi ideology, he managed by remarkably skilful propaganda to persuade a nation that it was being led to a great destiny. This study, first published in 1964, now includes much new material on the practice of propaganda by the Nazis. Second edition £1.50 Oxford Paperbacks

Philosophy & Public Affairs provides a format for in-depth discussion by philosophers of different viewpoints and philosophically inclined writers from various disciplines—including law, political science, economics and sociology—of issues of public concern. “. . . It would be encouraging to know that its contents, and those of future issues, were going to be read where it matters: by the small number of people who are regularly expected or invited to debate public affairs in public.”—Times Literary Supplement
