Announcements

Fulbright Scholars Available For Short-Term Visits

More than 150 Fulbright scholars from all regions of the world, currently in the United States for college and university teaching and advanced research, are available for occasional lectures, seminars and special programs. The Council for International Exchange of Scholars (CIES), which administers the Senior Scholar Fulbright Program, announced that limited funds would be available to facilitate travel to interested institutions, particularly those which have had little opportunity to participate in the Fulbright Scholar Exchange Program.

The Council has prepared a brochure describing the Occasional Lecturer Program and listing by discipline Fulbright scholars who welcome short-term invitations. The entries include proposed topics, home and U.S. affiliations. A copy of the brochure is available from Mary W. Ernst, Council for International Exchange of Scholars, 11 Dupont Circle, N.W., Department N, Washington, D.C. 20036; (202) 833-4979. Also available upon request is the 1981-82 Directory of Visiting Fulbright Scholars, a by-discipline list of more than 700 scholars, indexed by home country and by state of host institution. ■

Nominations Solicited For V. O. Key Award

Books nominated for the Southern Political Science Association's V. O. Key Book Award for the best book published in 1981 on an aspect of southern politics should be received by April 15, 1982. The basic criteria for nomination are:

1. A submitted book should focus on the politics and/or political process (broadly defined) of the South. This includes the states of the former Confederacy (Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, and Virginia):

- a. collectively
- b. individually
- c. cities/towns/countries in the region
- d. subregion
- e. influential individual(s)

2. If edited, a submitted book should contain original essays that adhere to a central theme rather than a reprinting of previously published work.

3. The writing and analysis should be in the tradition of V. O. Key's scholarship. This includes at least one or more of the following:

- a. The method of analysis should yield information that advances our understanding of the political world by supporting, negating, or modifying existing theory or by generating new theory.
- b. The question under examination should be theoretically relevant.
- c. The book should demonstrate a sensitivity to and a skill in handling theoretical questions.
- d. Quantitative methods, if employed, should be both clear and replicable.
- e. Our understanding of the political world should be enhanced and advanced by the conclusions of the study.

4. A submitted book might replicate an earlier volume, might provide fresh examination of an earlier work utilizing the same and/or newer methods of analysis.

5. A submitted book might utilize newer methods of analysis to examine an historically important political event or problem.

Nominated books are to be sent directly to each member of the V. O. Key Book Award Committee. The members are:

Alan Abramowitz, Department of Government, College of William and Mary, Williamsburg, Virginia 23185; (804) 253-4486.

Merle Black, Department of Political Science, Hamilton Hall 070A, University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, North Carolina 27514; (919) 962-3041.

Anne Permaloff, Department of Government, Auburn University, Montgomery, Alabama 36117; (205) 279-9110, x301.

Debra W. Stewart, Department of Political Science, North Carolina State University, P.O. Box 5305, Raleigh, North Carolina 27650; (919) 737-2481. ■

Newsletter Offers Legislative Tracking

The Public Law Reporter, a new newsletter designed to help legal professionals keep track of legislation enacted by Congress, is available free of charge from Congressional Information Service, Inc. (CIS).

Each issue of the Reporter contains brief descriptions of the provisions of important new laws, plus a checklist of all laws enacted to date by the current Congress.

The newsletter is part of the recently inaugurated CIS Legislative History Service, which makes available copies of all official publications relevant to the passage of significant public laws. The Reporter identifies the laws for which legislative histories are available or forthcoming from CIS.

To request a free newsletter subscription, write (on institutional letterhead) to: Public Law Reporter, Congressional Information Service, Inc., P.O. Box 30056, Bethesda, Maryland 20814. Or call Customer Service at (800) 636-8380 or (301) 654-1550. ■

Southern Consortium To Review Publications

The Southern Consortium of University Public Service Organizations has established a Publication Review Program for the purpose of increasing the credibility and value of publications of public service organizations. The Consortium has appointed Patricia S. Florestano, Director of the Institute for Governmental Service, University of Maryland, as the first editor to serve a two-year term. The 16 members of the Editorial Board include Consortium members with professional training, experience, and knowledge that qualify the board to review and evaluate manuscripts submitted to it.

The Southern Consortium of University Public Service Organizations is an association of campus-based units whose primary mission includes research, instructional and consultative service to governmental and public sector organizations. The Chairman of the Consortium is Delmer Dunn, Director of the Institute of Government, University of Georgia. ■

Freedom of Information Center Offers Scholars Assistance

The Freedom of Information Service Center offers cost-free, prompt legal advice and assistance to all scholars, journalists and writers seeking information under the federal Freedom of Information Act or the 49 state FOI Acts.

With a full-time experienced FOI attorney and several law student researchers, the Center helps overcome administrative red tape, delay and confusion so that scholars can obtain the information they need for their research quickly and with a minimum of bureaucratic hassles.

The FOI Service Center is a joint project of the Society of Professional Journalists (SDJ) and the Reporters Committee for Freedom of the Press, 1125 15th Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20005; (202) 466-6312. ■

Centre for Economic and Political Analysis Founded

The Centre for Economic and Political Analysis (CEPA) has been founded at the University of Essex. It aims at providing a strong analytical base for the study of certain important economic and political issues of the 1980s and beyond. It will integrate economic, political and social factors which jointly play a part in increasing the interdependence of the world economy.

In providing such a framework, CEPA starts from the recognition that the conventional lines of political divisions are breaking down. It intends to use this opportunity to develop a theoretical analysis and to apply it to the examination of issues at the national and at the international level. CEPA will undertake research programs, conferences (designed to bring together experts from national and international agencies as well as academics), and a publications program.

Membership in CEPA is open to the academic community as well as to experts from national and international organizations. The categories of members are: fellows, who are scholars currently working at the University of Essex; associates, who are professionals associated with research projects; and affiliates, who are experts or organizations interested in the activities of the Centre and wish to receive its publications and to be kept informed of its activities. CEPA is directed by Graciela Chichilnisky, professor of economics, University of Essex. The board of directors includes: J. Blondel, I. Budge, G. Heal, B. Sarlvik, N. Schofield, and P. Townsend.

Further information is available from: CEPA, University of Essex, Wivenhoe Park, Colchester, CO4 3SQ. ■

Loyola University Presents Political Analysis Lectures

Loyola University of Chicago announces the eighth presentation of its continuing program, The Loyola Lectures in Political Analysis.

During the two-week period of March 22 to April 2, 1982, Richard S. Hartigan, professor of political science at Loyola University of Chicago, and director of the Loyola Lectures in Political Analysis will present a series of six public lectures entitled "The Future Remembered: Biology, Politics and Man." These lectures will deal with the impact of the developments in socio-biology on the study of politics.

For further information, contact Thomas S. Engeman, Loyola University of Chicago, 820 North Michigan Avenue, Chicago, Illinois 60611; (312) 670-3111. ■

Research Prize Honors Comparative Scholars

The International Social Science Council and the Conjunto Universitario Candido Mendes (Rio de Janeiro) have set up a bi-annual prize named after Stein Rokkan to be awarded every two years, starting in 1981, and amounting to $2,000.

The prize is intended to crown a seminal contribution in comparative social science research written in English, French or German, by a scholar under 40 years of age at the end of each biennium. The work can be a manuscript, a printed book, or collected work written or published during the biennium. The first prize will be awarded for work written or published during 1980 and 1981.

Four copies of manuscripts typed double-spaced or of printed works shall be delivered together with a formal application for the prize to the International Social Science Council before March of each biennium (for example, March 31, 1981) for the prize to be awarded in late 1981. Manuscripts and publications received shall not be returned.

Works submitted shall be evaluated by the International Social Science Council with the assistance of appropriate referee or referees, under the supervision of the European Consortium for Political Research (ECSR) and its Chairman.

For further information, write to: The Secretary-General, International Social Science Council, Unesco, 1 rue Miollis, 75015 Paris, France. ■

Brown University Press Establishes First Book Awards

The Brown University Press is establishing First Book Prize Awards. These are intended to draw attention to manuscripts of exceptionally able men and women who have not previously published book-length works. Recently completed doctoral dissertations will be considered, provided that they have been duly revised for publication in book form. The Brown University Press proposes to honor work of exceptional quality and to draw attention to it, thereby helping to advance the academic careers of men and women capable of such scholarship.

This is not intended to be a competition in the usual sense. Outstanding manuscripts will be published by the Brown University Press. In a single calendar year, as many as three or four may be chosen; in another year, none may be selected. The intent is clear—to secure recognition for exceptionally able younger scholars, so that they will remain in the academic profession, pursuing their intended careers.

Andrew W. Mellon Foundation support for scholarship in the humanities will enable Brown University also to offer an opportunity for certain of the prize winners not affiliated with Brown University to spend two years in teaching and scholarship at Brown in their respective humanistic disciplines.

Send inquiries and manuscripts to: Brown University Press, Box 1881, Providence, Rhode Island 02912. ■

Social Justice Directories Solicit Suggestions

Political scientists have been asked to suggest names of periodicals to be included in a directory of United States Progressive Periodicals and one for Southern Progressive Periodicals.

In all, over 300 social change periodicals will be listed in the two directories. The annotated listings will include periodicals concerning peace, labor, black, religious, environmental and many more progressive topics.

Suggestions for listings should be sent to Progressive Education, P.O. Box 120574, Nashville, Tennessee 37212 as soon as possible. The directories may also be ordered through Progressive Education. ■

Innovations Sought In Presidential Debates

The League of Women Voters is soliciting advice and ideas on how to present future presidential debates. The League is not so much interested in critiques of past debates as in positive suggestions on how to design debates so that they do the best possible job of informing and educating voters about candidates. Suggestions are welcomed on the following and any other debate-related topics: objective measures to determine "nationally significant candidates"; alternate debate formats which provide opportunities to compare candidates, their stands on issues and their capability to govern; procedures for treatment of non-major party candidates who may or may not be "nationally significant."

The League is particularly interested in suggestions and innovations that go beyond traditional debates and the status quo of law and regulation.

Please send any written materials to Sheri Lanoff, Debates Project, League of Women Voters, 1730 M Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20036. If you have any questions or would like to give your suggestions over the telephone, the League's phone number is (202) 296-1770. ■

Urban Affairs Group Changes Name

The Council of University Institutes for Urban Affairs, founded in 1969, has changed its name to the Urban Affairs Association (UAA).

UAA Chairperson Patricia Florestano indicated the action was taken to affirm that membership in the organization was not limited to institutes, centers, or departments, or to those affiliated with a college or university. Individual membership in the Association is open to anyone involved in education, training, service, administration, or research in urban affairs.

The organization's goals—encouraging the dissemination of information and research findings about urbanism and urbanization and fostering the development of urban affairs as a professional and academic field—remain the same.

A 1980-81 directory, Urban University Programs, which provides a comprehensive listing of university programs in urban affairs, is available by sending $10 to: Urban Affairs Association, University of Delaware, Newark, Delaware 19711; (302) 738-2394. ■

Scholars Establish Ethical Problems Center

A new organization aimed at the encouragement of scholarly examination of problems of human action in the late modern period has been incorporated in New York. The Institution for the Study of Ethical Problems, a New York State not-for-profit corporation, was founded by a small group of junior scholars with backgrounds in political science,

News of the Profession

economics and political philosophy. The initial directors are Donald Jenner (executive director), Irene Scheuer, Robert Yaffee, James Hilborn (public member), and Joseph Doherty. Each brings special areas of business or scholarly experience to the board.

The Institution for the Study of Ethical Problems (ISEP) intends to begin fund-raising activities among a selected group of private individuals and private-sector corporations. Monies raised will be used to underwrite the costs of sponsored research on topics tied to planned yearly conferences, the conferences themselves, and the publication of proceedings in an ISEP yearbook.

Membership in the institution is limited to those who are elected to the board of directors, members of the advisory panel, and those persons receiving grants for the support of sponsored research. For further information, contact the Executive Director, Institution for the Study of Ethical Problems, 310 Greenwich Street, Suite 15B, New York, New York 10013. ■

Responsibilities Shared At Legislative Studies Quarterly

Beginning with the 1982 volume, the editorial responsibilities of the Legislative Studies Quarterly will be shared among three persons as follows: Malcolm E. Jewell, University of Kentucky, will handle manuscripts on U.S. state and local legislatures. Samuel C. Patterson, University of Iowa, will assume responsibility for all manuscripts on the U.S. Congress. Gerhard Loewenberg, University of Iowa, will continue to handle all manuscripts on non-American legislatures. Michael Mezey, DePaul University, will continue to edit the "Comparative Legislative Studies Newsletter" that appears in the LSQ.

Authors should send manuscripts directly to the appropriate co-editor: Jewell at the Department of Political Science, University of Kentucky, 40506; Patterson and Loewenberg at the Comparative Legislative Research Center, 304 Schaeffer

Hall, University of Iowa, Iowa City, Iowa 52242. ■

State Politics Newsletter Increases Number of Issues

Beginning with the 1982 volume, the Comparative State Politics Newsletter will be published six times a year, rather than five. The cost of individual subscriptions has been increased to $10 a year; that remains the institutional rate. Anyone wishing to receive a sample copy or wishing to subscribe should write to: Malcolm E. Jewell, Editor, Newsletter, Department of Political Science, University of Kentucky, Lexington, Kentucky 40506. Checks should be made out to: University of Kentucky: CSPN. ■

Maxwell School Publishes Essays on Public Affairs Programs

The Maxwell School of Syracuse University has published the second volume in an occasional series of publications reviewing major developments in education for the public service. The second volume contains ten essays by 15 authors. The essays review major curriculum developments in public administration, public affairs, and public policy, including specific articles on the development of joint JD-MPA degree programs, the relationships between education for public policy and for public administration, and public affairs education in a generic school. The volume is edited by Guthrie S. Birkhead, Dean of The Maxwell School, and James D. Carroll, professor, The Maxwell School.

Copies of the publication are available from the Dean's Office, The Maxwell School, Syracuse University, Syracuse, New York 13210, at $6 a copy. ■

Schechter. Single copies are available for $5 from Mary Duffy, Center for the Study of Federalism, Temple University, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania 19122. ■

New Journal on Elections To Be Published

The British Politics Group Newsletter reports the following:

"David Butler and Bo Sarlvik are editors of a newly founded journal, Electoral Studies. The first issue will appear in 1982. The annual subscription price for individuals (three issues) is $31.25.

"Electoral Studies is to be an international journal focusing on voting—what causes a nation's voters to act as they do, what are the consequences of their voting? The journal is to be a forum for diverse approaches to these questions. It will contain articles on elections in particular countries as well as on electoral systems and procedures, on campaign tactics and voting behavior. Its scope will be both theoretical and empirical. In addition it will provide a record of significant election results across the world and offer notes on major books and articles published in the field.

"The editors especially welcome comparative and theoretical articles. The typical article should run about 10,000 words, although shorter notes might merit publication. Manuscripts can be submitted for evaluation to David Butler, Nuffield College, Oxford University, Oxford, OX1 1NF, England."

(Editor's Note: Information on subscriptions to the British Politics Group Newsletter is available by writing British Politics Group Newsletter, Department of Political Science, 503 Ross Hall, Iowa State University, Ames, Iowa 50011. Gerald Dorfman is Newsletter editor.) ■

Comparative Research Journal

The Comparative Interdisciplinary Studies Section of the International Studies Association and the Byrnes International Center of the University of South Carolina have announced the publication of a quarterly journal entitled Comparative Research.

Comparative Research is designed to serve the professional, academic and research needs of a wide variety of audiences whose interests lie in comparative research and analysis in social sciences. The journal reports on the following:

- * Reports on research projects currently in progress
- * Programs of institutes and organizations actively involved in comparative research
- * Abstracts and listing of new books, articles and papers which analyze the national and international issues in comparative perspective
- * Research resources for comparativists
- * Information about fellowships and grant programs
- * Information on recent and forthcoming conferences
- * Reporting on research methods and new approaches in the area of comparative research

Comparative Research is available to members of the International Studies

Association by joining the Comparative Interdisciplinary Studies Section for an additional $5.00 per year.

Comparative Research is available to non-members at a subscription cost of $20.00 per year. All orders must be prepaid in U.S. dollars only. Checks should be made payable to International Studies Association and sent to International Studies Association, The University of South Carolina, Columbia, South Carolina 29208. ■

Journal Focuses on Israel

A new journal Israel Social Science Research — A Multidisciplinary Journal, will be devoted to the publication of social science research about Israel. The objective is to provide a forum for discussion and exchange of information on issues related to social behavior in Israeli society.

Articles will be accepted for the social sciences and related applied sciences broadly defined to include sociology, psychology, anthropology, economics, political science, history and education.

Focus should be on Israeli society or some of its sectors or ethnic or cultural groups; also comparative studies will be included.

Manuscripts should be submitted in triplicate. Ordinarily manuscripts will be accepted that are at a maximum 20 typed, double spaced pages. The format for tables and references will be the same as the American Sociological Review. Initially the journal will be published twice a year. It will become a quarterly journal when the volume of contributions and the financial position of the journal warrants the change.

The administrative offices of the journal are located at the Hubert H. Humphrey Center for Social Ecology at Ben Gurion University, Beer Sheva, Israel. ■

Historians Preserve Radical Newspapers

The bibliography and archival preservation of non-English Labor and Radical newspapers and periodicals in North America is being undertaken with the cooperation of the Organization of American Historians and the National Endowment for the Humanities. The project concentrates on labor newspapers and other periodical publications which were available between 1845 and 1976. It is estimated that there are between 650 and 1500 such publications. The project will be carried out between 1980 and 1982 by a group of international scholars located in the U.S. and in the countries of emigration. It is expected that this bibliography and the preservation of such material will aid scholars studying comparative cultural history of immigrants; the cultural history of the working class; ethnic history; and the political emergence of the working class. For more information, contact: Dick Hoerder, Department of History, University of Bremen, Bremen, West Germany. ■

Soviet Activities Monitored

The California Institute of International Studies, with its offices at Stanford, California, publishes the quarterly WORLD AFFAIRS REPORT, which gives an area by area and country by country analysis of Soviet activities around the world and of Soviet interpretations of world events, based on Soviet and other sources. It is now in its eleventh year.

The Institute has signed a contract with Dialog, the largest information retrieval system in the world; in all some 14,000 terminals are connected with it.

Dialog will put all the back issues on line, and then keep up the computerization of the issues as they appear.

This means that all around the world subscribers will be able to retrieve information about any aspect of international affairs in which the Soviet Union is involved.

Work on the back volumes is now proceeding. Another announcement will be issued when it is completed.

Paul Seabury of the University of California is the chairman of the Institute's Board of Directors. Ronald Hilton, professor emeritus at Stanford University, is Executive Director and Editor of the WORLD AFFAIRS REPORT.

For more information, write to Ronald Hilton, Asian Languages Bldg 250, Stanford University, Stanford, CA 94305. ■

Politics and Society Develops Radical Frameworks

Politics and Society is committed to developing Marxist and other radical frameworks for understanding the social roots and consequences of politics. In its broadest sense politics encompasses conflicts over the shape of social life from the shop floor and the family to the realms of the state and the world economy. The journal encourages contributions from people in many disciplines and published theoretical essays, historical investigations, and theoretically structured empirical research.

Articles in recent issues have included:

- Alejandro Portes, "Migration and Underdevelopment"
- Michael Burawoy, "Toward a Marxist Theory of the Labor Process: Braverman and Beyond"
- Ira Katznelson, "Community,

Capitalist Development and the Emergence of Class"

Issue volume 9, number 3, includes:

- Jane Jenson and George Ross, "The Uncharted Waters of De-Stalinization"
- Victoria E. Bonnell, "Trade Unions, Parties, and the State in Tsarist Russia"
- Erik Olin Wright, "Varieties of Marxist Conceptions of Class Structure"

Forthcoming issues will feature Michael Piore on class struggle and divided labor markets; Wood on foreign aid and the state; Duboff and Hurman's critique of Chandler's business history; Przeworski on class compromise; Skocpol on Marxist state theory and the New Deal.

Exploring Career Alternatives Beyond the Academy

SCHOLARS IN TRANSITION is a non-profit career development service which has been developed with funding from the Fund for the Improvement of Postsecondary Education.

For 1981-1982, SCHOLARS IN TRANSITION is offering three distinctive programs for scholars that focus on different stages of the career planning process:

- six-week seminars encompassing every stage of the process, from self-assessment to interviewing technique.
- two-week seminars that concentrate on the analysis of transferable skills and career priorities.
- three-day workshops on resume writing and interviewing, for scholars who have already defined their career goals.

For dates, costs, and other information about these programs write or phone Dr. Mary Hayes Somers or Dr. Carl Zengerl, co-directors of SCHOLARS IN TRANSITION, 432 Park Avenue South, New York, N.Y. 10016 (212) 689-1931. ■

Maryland Announces Public Management Program

The University of Maryland's School of Public Affairs announces a new graduate program leading to the degree of MASTER OF PUBLIC MANAGEMENT. The primary objective of the School is to provide students with an opportunity for graduate, professional education preparing them for careers in public policy in both the public and private sectors. The School also plans to have an active research program with projects selected to be of use to federal, state, and local governments.

The School has an independent full-time faculty headed by Dean Albert H. Bowker. When it is in full operation the School will offer a Master of Public Management (MPM) degree and a Doctor of Philosophy (Ph.D.) degree in Policy Studies. The first Master's students will be full-time, and will begin the program in fall semester 1982. The mid-career program will not formally begin until fall 1983.

The purpose of the Master's Program is to develop the critical and analytical skills necessary to the understanding and managing of public sector problems. The curriculum will include quantitative, economic, political, and normative methods of analysis and acquaint students with strategies and techniques for implementation and evaluation of programs and policies. Students will also be encouraged to take elective courses in related schools and departments, including the School of Business and Management, the Department of Economics and Government and Politics, and the School of Law.

Anyone interested in obtaining further information about this program may contact the School of Public Affairs, Suite 1218, Social Sciences Building, University of Maryland, College Park, Maryland 20742 or by calling (301) 454-6193. ■

Non-Lawyers Study Law

Yale Law School offers a Master of Studies in Law (M.S.L.) Program which enables scholars and journalists to study law at Yale for one year. These degree candidates enroll with the first-year class in the fall and take elective courses in the spring. They compete with and are graded on the same basis as regular law students.

M.S.L. degree recipients are not eligible for subsequent admission to J.D. candidacy, nor will simultaneous application to the two programs be entertained.

Eligibility

The total enrollment of the program is limited to ten persons per year. For the duration of a grant from the Ford Foundation, five of these places will be reserved for journalists. Preference in filling the remaining five places will be given to college teachers and scholars for whom the program was originally designed. The minimal education requirement is, however, a bachelor's degree.

Selection Process

Applications consist of the following:

1. a complete curriculum vitae
2. a statement of how this program will fit the candidate's intellectual needs and career goals
3. transcripts of all undergraduate and graduate work
4. three letters of recommendation from people who have worked closely with the candidate and can comment on his or her intellectual preparation for legal study

Applications should be sent to Dean James W. Zirkle, Yale Law School, Box 401-A Yale Station, New Haven, CT 06520 by February 1, 1982. ■

GRADUATE WORK IN EUROPE

Department of Government, University of Essex

The University of Essex, one of Europe's major political science centers, is keen to attract more graduate students from the United States and Canada.

The University offers no fewer than nine M.A. degrees in political science. The English M.A. differs from that in many other countries in being a self-contained, one-year degree. It is meant to be a valid degree in its own right, not merely a stopping place on the road to some other degree. It is ideal for someone who would like a "graduate year abroad," perhaps before finding a permanent job or going on to a professional school. It keeps open the option of further graduate work without committing the student in any way.

The Essex M.A.s are in the following fields: Political Theory, Political Economy, Political Behaviour, Latin American Government and Politics, Soviet Government and Politics, United States Government and Politics, Western European Politics, Ideology and Discourse Analysis, and History and Philosophy of Social and Political Science.

The British Ph.D. also differs from that in many other countries in being a research-only degree. It thus permits the student to concentrate almost exclusively on a research topic that interests him or her. The resulting dissertation is expected to be of high quality, and a large proportion of Essex Ph.D.s in recent years have been published.

Among the people who teach at Essex are Anthony King, editor of The New American Political System; Jean Blondel, founder of the European Consortium for Political Research, author of World Leaders and co-author of The Government of France; Bo Särilvik and Ivor Crewe, co-authors of The Conservative Victory in Retrospect; Robert Goodin, author of The Politics of Rational Man and Manipulatory Politics; Mary McAuley, author of Politics and the Soviet Union; Bob Jessop, author of Theories of the Capitalist State; and Graham Wilson, author of Unions and Politics: The American Experience and Interest Groups in the United States.

Essex is the home of the European Consortium for Political Research, the Essex Summer School in Social Science Data Analysis, the SSRC Survey Archive, the British Election Study, and the British Journal of Political Science.

Foreign scholars who have visited Essex for a year or more include Fred I. Greenstein, Hugh Hecló, Robert Alford, Samuel C. Patterson, Jack Dennis, Charles Anderson, Richard Merelman, and Richard Simeon.
