Birds and Habitat

Relationships in Changing Landscapes

Edited by Robert J. Fuller

Ecological Reviews

Drawing on valuable recent advances in our understanding of bird-habitat relationships, this book provides the first major review of avian habitat selection in over twenty years. It offers a synthesis of concepts, patterns and issues that will interest students, researchers and conservation practitioners. Spatial scales ranging from landscape to habitat patch are covered, and examples of responses to habitat change are examined.

*Second Edition!Conservation

Clive Hambler and Susan M. Canney

"This book is exceptional in many ways. It captures the essence of the naturalist's fascination with the diversity of life while at the same time covering comprehensively the history and basics of conservation biology and the importance of conservation for the future of our planet. I am particularly pleased with the attention to priority-setting, and other important issues such as corridors, rewilding, the fundamental importance of species, and how essential ecosystem services derive from biodiversity. In the post Rio+20 world, there is growing recognition of the fact that nature must be central to sustainable development and not just an interesting side issue. This book makes a major contribution to demonstrating this, and overall greatly enhances our understanding of conservation in general. A must read for everyone, and especially for students, researchers, and conservation practitioners."

JOURNALS

Journal of Tropical Ecology

Editor

Ian Turner, Winchelsea, UK

Journal of Tropical Ecology publishes papers in the important and now established field of the ecology of tropical regions, either arising from original research (experimental or descriptive) or forming significant reviews. First published in 1985, Journal of Tropical Ecology has become a major international ecological journal. With clear, stimulating and readable reports of recent research findings, the journal provides a platform for the dissemination of information on all aspects of tropical communities and ecosystems

Oryx

The International Journal of Conservation

Published for Fauna & Flora International

Editor

Martin Fisher, Fauna & Flora International, UK

Oryx -- The International Journal of Conservation is a quarterly peer-reviewed journal of biodiversity conservation, conservation policy and sustainable use, and the interaction of these subjects with social, economic and political issues. The journal has a particular interest in material that has the potential to improve conservation management and practice, supports the publishing and communication aspirations of conservation researchers and practitioners worldwide and helps build capacity for conservation. Besides articles and short communications, Oryx regularly publishes reviews, forum sections and letters, and every issue includes comprehensive reporting of international conservation news.

Instructions for Contributors

Bird Conservation International publishes papers and communications on subjects relevant to the conservation of birds, with a general preference for those addressing international or high national priorities.

Submission of manuscripts. Electronic versions of papers should be submitted online at <http://journals.cambridge.org/BCI> or, in exceptional circumstances, via email to bcieditor@bto.org. Please follow the guidelines in the Instructions for Authors.

Proofs. The corresponding author will receive, by email, page proofs for checking which they are required to return within three days of receipt. Textual changes in proof cannot normally be countenanced and the publisher reserves the right to charge authors for excessive correction of non-typographical errors.

Offprints. A .pdf proof of the published article will be emailed to the first author unless otherwise requested; printed copies may be purchased if ordered at proof stage on the form provided.

Copyright. Authors of articles published in the journal assign copyright to BirdLife International (with certain rights reserved) and a copyright assignment form will be sent to the author for signature on acceptance of a paper.
