CONTRIBUTORS TO THIS ISSUE

GARY M. BELL is Assistant Professor of History at Sam Houston State University. He is the author of "John Man, The Last Elizabethan Resident Ambassador to Spain," The Sixteenth Century Journal (October, 1976); and "Thomas Chaloner's Diplomatic Expenses in Spain," Bulletin of the Institute of Historical Research (May, 1980). At present he is completing a handlist of Tudor-Stuart diplomats, 1485-1688, and working on a study of English diplomatic institutions, procedures and personnel, 1509-1642.

PETER DUNKLEY is Assistant Professor of History at Georgetown University. He has published articles on the poor laws in The Historical Journal, English Historical Review, and International Review of Social History. His book, The Crisis of the Old Poor Law in England, 1795-1834, will be published this year. Currently he is working on a sequel to the article in this issue, which will examine the status and activities of large landowners in the reformed poor relief system.

JOAN KENT is Associate Professor of History at Sweet Briar College. She is the author of "Attitudes of Members of the House of Commons to the Regulation of Personal Conduct in Late Elizabethan and Early Stuart England," Bulletin of the Institute of Historical Research, XLVI (1973), and "Population Mobility and Alms: Poor Migrants in the Midlands During the Early Seventeenth Century," Local Population Studies (forthcoming). She is now completing a monograph on "The Office of the English Constable, c. 1580-1642."

MARK A. KISHLANSKY is Associate Professor of History at the University of Chicago. He is the author of The Rise of the New Model Army (1979) and several articles on the English Revolution. At present he is at work on a study of Elizabethan political and social structures.

PETER MUNSCHÉ is currently executive assistant to a committee studying the establishment of an institute of advanced studies at the University of Toronto. He is the author of Gentlemen and Poachers: The English Game Laws, 1671-1831 to be published by Cambridge University Press this year.

C. JOHN SOMMERVILLE is Associate Professor of History at the University of Florida. He is the author of Popular Religion in Restoration England (1977), and more recently has begun publishing on the subject of popular perceptions of childhood.

RICHARD TEICHGRAEBER III is Assistant Professor of History at Newcomb College, Tulane University. He is completing a book titled From the Moral Sense to the Free Market: Scottish Sources of Adam Smith's Politics. His articles have appeared in the Journal of the History of Ideas and in the History of European Ideas.

J.A. THOMPSON is Associate Professor and Chairman of the Department of History at the University of Kentucky. He is editor of The Collapse of the British Liberal Party and author of The Modern British Monarchy. He is preparing a new history of the Peace Ballot and (with Arthur Mejia) a study of traditional English conservatism during the Edwardian age.
