THE MERCHANT OF PRATO

Francesco di Marco Datini 1335-1410

by IRIS ORIGO

One of the great success stories of the Middle Ages is the career of Francesco di Marco Datini, a Tuscan merchant-banker in the age of Boccaccio.

- ☞ Francesco di Marco was only fifteen when he left Prato for Avignon, to establish a trading firm in what was then Europe's most prosperous city. Soon he was a rich man, dealing in wool, saffron, sacred pictures, household goods, and spices. In Florence, he set up a great export-import firm with branches and agents throughout Europe.
- ☞ He willed to the city of Prato his 150,000 letters and papers—including his intimate correspondence with his wife, which gives a unique view of a rich medieval household and a stormy marriage. The Marchesa Origo has made brilliant use of these documents to produce a biography as scholarly as it is fascinating.
