Two volumes in the STUDIES IN SOCIAL DISCONTINUITY Series

LABOR, CLASS, AND THE INTERNATIONAL SYSTEM

BY ALEJANDRO PORTES AND JOHN WALTON

Labor, Class, and the International System combines theory and empirical research in examining the changing relations between developed and developing countries. The authors deal with the processes that sustain inequality in the contemporary international system. They consider labor markets and class structures and how transfers of labor and capital link countries into a single international system. Through a series of research-grounded studies, the authors challenge accepted views of interdependence and uneven development.

CAPITALISM AND LEGAL CHANGE

An African Transformation

BY FRANCIS G. SNYDER

This book is a study of relationships between legal ideas and economic organization. It describes and analyzes some of the changes in legal forms which accompany the subsumption of precapitalist societies into the world capitalist economy. During the past century rural communities in Africa, Asia, and Latin America have been integrated into the world economy more decisively than ever before. Using a particular instance to exemplify these processes, the book discusses legal and economic changes among the Banjal of Senegal between 1900 and 1975. In addition to its intrinsic ethnographic interest, Banjal history illuminates the transformation which in various forms has characterized virtually all underdeveloped countries.

UNDERDEVELOPMENT AND THE TRANSITION TO SOCIALISM

Mozambique and Tanzania

BY JAMES H. MITTELMAN

Underdevelopment and the Transition to Socialism evaluates the promise and problems of socialism in the Third World. Mittelman investigates critical challenges facing countries officially committed to socialism, particularly Mozambique and Tanzania. He refines the concepts of transition and conjuncture with data on African political economies gathered in seven countries over a 5-year period.

THE JOURNAL OF MODERN AFRICAN STUDIES

The Journal offers a quarterly survey of politics, economics, and related topics in contemporary Africa.

The main emphasis is upon the peoples and policies, the problems and progress of this dynamic and disparate continent; upon the many societies that are evolving rather than the essential characteristics of the old; upon the present, not on the more distant past. The best current work is sought from specialists in different academic disciplines, whose contributions can illuminate and cross-fertilise one another.

The Journal seeks to promote a deeper understanding of what is happening in Africa today. It is intended for both the political scientist and the practical politician, the administrator and the advocate, the economist and the educator, the banker and the business man, the diplomat and the technocrat, the civil servant and the nationalist leader. All have something to contribute to these pages and, it is hoped, much to learn from them.

Editorial policy avoids commitment to any political viewpoint or ideology, whether imperialism, pan-Africanism, capitalism, socialism, or nationalism. Such concepts, however, have relevance to the modern African situation, and merit serious discussion, often from several different points of view, in order that controversial issues may be fairly examined.
