Here, in their own words, are the authentic adventures of the archaeological explorers of Mexico, Central America, and Peru. "Not only authentic, but refreshingly delightful reading. . . . ## THE RISE AND FALL OF CIVILIZATIONS: MODERN ARCHAEOLOGICAL APPROACHES TO ANCIENT CULTURES

Selected readings from NEW WORLD and OLD WORLD archaeological studies

Edited by Jeremy A. Sabloff and Carl C. Lamberg-Karlovsky
Harvard University

Emphasizing theory and methodology, this reader can be used in any introductory or intermediate archaeology course concerned with how archaeologists explain the formation, development and collapse of past civilizations. Further emphasis is placed on ecological and demographic considerations. The readings are divided equally between New World and Old World (fifteen readings on each plus three introductory background readings). Special emphasis is on Mesoamerica and Mesopotamia with additional materials from Peru, Egypt, the Indus, China, and Europe. Included in the thirty-three readings are four original papers by G.R. Willey, G.W. Conrad, K.C. Day and R. Tringham.

Men of the Earth

An Introduction to World Prehistory
Brian M. Fagan

University of California, Santa Barbara

Here's a highly readable narrative on human prehistory — jargon-free and heavily illustrated — written specifically for the beginning student in archaeology. Covering the period from the origins of man to the beginning of literate civilization, it deals with the results of archaeological research — the story of prehistoric man that has been pieced together from evidence left behind. Emphasis is on the courses of major cultural change — the cultural process. The first part of the book summarizes archaeological methods and theory, with concentration on some of the major theories of world prehistory. The geographical coverage of the book is unusually broad, and the content is highly current. A very comprehensive bibliography is also included.

Paper approx. 450 pages March 1974

Corridors in Time

A Reader in Introductory Archaeology

University of California, Santa Barbara

An introductory reader in archaeology, CORRIDORS IN TIME covers the methods and theories of archaeology, as well as major events in human prehistory. It offers a good balance of technical and non-technical writing, plus substantial coverage of both Old and New World archaeology. The major emphasis is on ethnographic research and analogy, with studies of modern subsistence situations that shed light on the life of prehistoric man. A concluding chapter contemplates the future of archaeology and the crises facing the discipline.

In the Beginning

An Introduction to Archaeology
Brian M. Fagan

University of California, Santa Barbara

IN THE BEGINNING deals with the complexity and vastness of man's past in a way that the beginning student can understand and enjoy. It is really a book about the science of archaeology itself, examining its various dimensions — methodological and theoretical — rather than the results of its research. It features an integrated approach, logical arrangement of subject matter, clear non-technical style, two-color text, and numerous illustrations. This is a book that will enable students to grasp the enormous periods of time with which archaeology deals, and to perceive the many ways it interprets and reconstructs the past.

Cloth 350 pages 1972

In Search of Man

Readings in Archaeology
Ernestene L. Green

Western Michigan University

The selections in this introductory reader, extracted from archaeological monographs and articles, were chosen to illustrate how archaeologists go about their work. The order of the readings intentionally parallels the stages of an archaeological field project, from research design, to site discovery, to recovery of data, to interpretation of remains. The passages are mainly reports on "classic," well-known projects, in order to familiarize students with the standard body of archaeological knowledge, and they represent a variety of archaeological goals, methods, and interpretations.
