CONTRIBUTORS TO THIS ISSUE

GERALD L. BELCHER is Assistant Professor of History at Beaver College. He has published articles entitled "Politics and Protocol: Diplomacy in the Age of Louis XIV" and "Between Medieval and Modern: Restoration London". He presently has a N.E.H. grant for research into the transmission of ideas from England to the American Colonies in the eighteenth century.

ARTHUR N. GILBERT is Associate Professor in the Graduate School of International Studies, University of Denver. Among his most recent articles are "The Africaine Courts-Martial: A Case Study of Buggery and the Royal Navy", "Doctor, Patient, and Onanist Diseases in the Nineteenth Century", and "Law and Honor in the Eighteenth Century British Army Officers Corps". He is presently writing a book entitled Buggery and the British Navy 1700-1861. Other research includes eighteenth-century military law and the history of sexual taboos.

JOYCE SENDERS PEDERSEN has taught English history at the University of Missouri, St. Louis, and is now a part-time teacher in the History Department at Washington University, St. Louis. She is engaged in a study of reform in women's secondary and higher education in England since the nineteenth century.

RICHARD P. ROSS has written several articles on Oronce Fine's printed works, including one in Isis (1975). He is presently living in Israel, serving as Assistant Editor to the Israel Journal of Mathematics and the Journal d'Analyse Mathématique, Mosad Weitzman, Jerusalem.

JAMES J. SACK is Assistant Professor of History at the University of Illinois, Chicago Circle Campus. He is currently working on the Grenvillites from 1801 to 1829.

RALPH V. TURNER is Professor of History at Florida State University. He has published a book, The King and His Courts: The Role of John and Henry III in the Administration of Justice, 1190-1240. He is continuing his study of the English courts and is also working on a collective biographical study of the royal judges from the time of Henry II through the minority of Henry III.

DIANE WILLEN is Assistant Professor of History at Georgia State University. She is currently writing a biography of John Russell, First Earl of Bedford.

Editor's Note: With this issue we welcome several newcomers to the masthead. Our new advisors are Professors HELEN F. MULVEY of Connecticut College, New London, and ROBERT A. SMITH of Emory University, Atlanta. We are also fortunate to have enlisted the help of three "overseas correspondents", who will keep J.B.S. informed about recent work in their respective fields: BARBARA HARVEY, Fellow of Somerville College, Oxford; HAROLD PERKIN, Professor of Social History, University of Lancaster; and KEITH THOMAS, Fellow of St. John's College, Oxford.
