Journal of the Society for American Music

Journal of the Society for American Music (JSAM) is an international, peer-reviewed journal that explores all aspects of American music and music in the Americas. JSAM is dedicated to supporting scholarship that transcends disciplinary boundaries, cutting across historical musicology, music theory, ethnomusicology, cultural theory, and American studies. JSAM encourages international dialogue across disciplines. The journal features articles, reviews of books, recordings, and multimedia items, and explorations of special topics.

Justin D Burton is Assistant Professor of Music at Rider University, where he teaches in the school's Popular Music Culture program. His research focus is on hip hop and the uses of technology in popular music. He has forthcoming essays in the Oxford Handbook of Mobile Music Studies and the Journal of Popular Culture.

Rachel Chacko is Assistant Professor of Music at Whitman College (Walla Walla, WA). She received a Ph.D. and D.M.A. from the University of Colorado at Boulder. Her current research focuses on the transcultural music of U.S. composer Lou Harrison.

William A. Everett is Professor of Musicology at the University of Missouri–Kansas City Conservatory of Music and Dance, where he also serves as Associate Dean of Graduate Studies. He is contributing co-editor of The Cambridge Companion to the Musical (2002; 2nd ed., 2008), and is a member of the Editorial Board for Studies in Musical Theatre. He has published studies of the lives and works of Sigmund Romberg (2007) and Rudolf Friml (2008).

María Gembero-Ustárroz, Permanent Researcher in Musicology at the CSIC (Consejo Superior de Investigaciones Científicas, the Spanish National Research Council), Institución Milá y Fontanals, in Barcelona, researches eighteenth-century Spanish music and the musical connections between Spain and colonial-era Latin America. Her publications include La música en la Catedral de Pamplona durante el siglo XVIII (1995) and articles on Spanish and Latin American music in Revista de Musicología, Latin American Music Review, and Early Music. She co-edited La música y el Atlántico: Relaciones musicales entre España y Latinoamérica (2007).

Francesca Inglese is a Ph.D. candidate in Ethnomusicology at Brown University. Her current ethnographic dissertation research explores the music and the embodied practices, public parades, and youth development projects of minstrel troupes (known as Kaapse Klopse in Afrikaans) in Cape Town, South Africa.

Mark Allan Jackson (Ph.D., Louisiana State University, 2002) is Associate Professor of English at Middle Tennessee State University, where he primarily teaches courses on American Folklore and Popular Culture. His publications include Prophet Singer: The Voice and Vision of Woody Guthrie (2007), and Jail House Bound: John Lomax's First Southern Prison Recordings, 1933 (2012).

David Kirby is the Robert O. Lawton Distinguished Professor of English at Florida State University. He is the author of Little Richard: The Birth of Rock 'n' Roll, which the Times Literary Supplement of London called a “hymn of praise to the emancipatory power of nonsense.” For more information, see www.davidkirby.com.

Kenneth Kreitner is Benjamin W. Rawlins Professor of Musicology at the Scheidt School of Music, University of Memphis, where he also directs the collegium and serves as Assistant Director for Graduate Studies. His books include Discoursing Sweet Music: Town Bands and Community Life in Turn-of-the-Century Pennsylvania (1990), and The Church Music of Fifteenth-Century Spain (2004), which was given the American Musicological Society's Robert M. Stevenson Award for research on Iberian music in 2007.

Mona Kreitner is a part-time Assistant Professor of Music at Rhodes College in Memphis, Tennessee, where she teaches music history and directs the Rhodes Women's Chorus. She also serves on the Graduate Music Faculty at the Scheidt School of Music at the University of Memphis. Her dissertation, "A Splendid Group of American Girls": The Women Who Sang with the Sousa Band, earned the Scheidt School's 2008 Graduate Document Award. She is a contributor to forthcoming second edition of The New Grove Dictionary of American Music.

Nikki Malley is Assistant Professor of Music and Director of Jazz Studies at Knox College where she teaches courses in Music of the African Diaspora, Jazz History, and 20th-Century Music, and directs the jazz ensemble and jazz combos. Her 2012 doctoral dissertation in musicology from the University of Iowa explores the improvisatory and participatory practices of auctioneering. She is Artistic Director of the Knox-Rootabaga Jazz Festival and performs regularly as a jazz vibraphonist.

Andre Mount is Assistant Professor of Music Theory at the Crane School of Music at SUNY Potsdam. He received a doctorate in music theory from the University of California at Santa Barbara, where his dissertation explored interactions between experimental art music and popular culture in the twentieth century. He has contributed to Music and the Moving Image and is currently researching metrical dissonance in electronic dance music.

Carrie Allen Tipton teaches at the University of Houston-Downtown. Her work has appeared in the Black Music Research Journal, the Journal of the Society for American Music, Ethnomusicology, and at numerous conferences, and is forthcoming in the Oxford American and new editions of the Encyclopedia of Southern Culture and the Grove Dictionary of American Music. Her current book project documents a historic Black gospel music television show in Georgia.

David Francis Urrows is Associate Professor in the Department of Music, Hong Kong Baptist University, where he teaches music history, composition, and music theory and analysis. He is the editor of two editions of the music of Otto Dresel (1826–90) published by A-R Editions (2002, 2009); has edited two volumes of the series Word and Music Studies (International Association for Word and Music Studies), and has published articles in journals such as American Music, Journal of Musicological Research, Fontes Artis Musicae, and the American Choral Review.

Denise Von Glahn is Professor of Musicology and Director of the Center for Music of the Americas at Florida State University. Her work has appeared in American Music, the Journal of the Society for American Music, and the Journal of the American Musicological Society. She has written on musical modernism, music and place, and women and music. Her newest book is Music and the Skillful Listener: American Women Composing the Natural World (2013). An earlier book, The Sounds of Place: Music and the American Cultural Landscape, won the ASCAP-Deems Taylor Award in 2004.

Richard D. Wetzel is Professor of Music History and Literature, and Chair of Graduate Studies in the School of Music of Ohio University, Athens, Ohio. His most recent book is The Globalization of Music in History (2012).

Trudi Wright serves on the faculties of Regis University and Metropolitan State University of Denver. She is currently working on a monograph based on her dissertation, which analyzes the union musical Pins and Needles (1937–1941). In 2010, the College Music Society recognized her sacred music history course, created for members of Trinity United Methodist Church, Denver, as an example of “best practices” in community engagement.
