János Kohn: in memoriam

It is with great regret that I have to inform EUROCALL members that our colleague, János Kohn, passed away in March of this year. János, as many of you will remember, was a member of the EUROCALL Executive Committee and the organiser of EUROCALL 96 in Hungary. He was taken ill just over a year ago and was diagnosed as having cancer. During the course of the EECALL Centre project for which János and I were jointly responsible at Dániel Berzsenyi College, Szombathely, 1991–96, we developed a close working relationship, and I came to regard János as a very good friend as well as a colleague. János was an energetic and hard working man, always able to overcome the problems that beset the project, especially in its early days when Hungary was still coming to terms with the rapidly changing circumstances after the borders were opened in 1989. János had a mischievous sense of humour and he loved to entertain the frequent visitors to the EECALL Centre. He was also a great scholar, a prolific writer and a professional translator. Those of us who had the fortune to work in the EECALL Centre and to attend the 1996 EUROCALL Conference will have fond memories of János Kohn, a brilliant organiser as well as a most entertaining host. He will be sadly missed. Our sympathy is extended to all his family, especially his wife Mária, and to all his colleagues in Hungary. The EUROCALL Executive Committee is considering various ways in which EUROCALL can commemorate János Kohn and further details will be announced in due course.
