Edited by John L. Scherer

"For specialists who have been frustrated by the traditional dearth of concrete reference data on China, the publication is a must. . . . Invaluable to observers of the Chinese scene who are looking for a single reference work containing information gleaned from publications which if accumulated would fill an entire bookshelf."—China Trade Report (Far Eastern Economic Review)

"An impressive compendium of information on China. . . . The editor claims that the variety of information and of sources consulted far outruns those for any other handbook in English; this reviewer agrees. . . . Future editions are planned as companion volumes stressing new features, documents, and particular areas of life to be treated in greater detail than in this initial volume of basic information. . . . It belongs in all China collections. . . . All libraries."—Choice

JAPAN'S ECONOMY

The Labor Market in Japan

Selected Readings

Edited by Shunsaku Nishikawa / Translated by Ross Mouer

In this volume, a group of economists describe and analyze the labor market in Japan and the wage system which serves as its framework. Their essays, which were originally published in leading Japanese economic journals, use statistical data to examine aspects of the working environment and the behavior of workers and employers. They focus on such specific issues as starting pay, working hours, job mobility, retirement, and unemployment. A number of the authors also explore the policy implications of some of the controversial items on Japan's internal economic agenda: a shortened workweek, extension of the retirement age, the right to strike in the public sector.

Indian Childhood

Cultural Ideals and Social Reality

SUDHIR KAKAR, Fellow, Centre for the Study of Developing Societies, Delhi. The place of children in Indian society from the earliest times to the present is the subject of this book. The loving indulgence towards the child which largely stems from the mother stands in sharp contrast with the prevailing Western conception of the child as a creature to be trained and socialized. An important point is the variance between the theoretical subjugation of the female with the actual dominance and power exerted by many women in both traditional and modern Indian society.

Asian Immigrant Children In School: Reflections of Teachers and Administrators

Edited by Chong-Sik Lee

What kinds of problems do Asian immigrant children face when they first land in the United States? What can teachers and schools do to alleviate their problems? These are the two principal questions discussed by panels of teachers and school administrators of the Philadelphia area at round-table sessions held in October 1978. The problem of communicating with the children and their parents, the cultural differences and the different patterns of behavior, the gap between the school and home, and the problems arising from lack of adult supervision after school hours are some of the topics discussed. The panelists recount their experiences and present observations with remarkable candor. Anecdotes and selections from diaries enliven the sessions. 77 pages. $4.50.

Lectures on the I Ching Constancy and Change

RICHARD WILHELM ✂

Translated and Edited by
IRENE EBER

As the West's foremost translator of this difficult and elusive text, Richard Wilhelm frequently wrote and lectured on the Book of Changes, supplying guidelines to its ideas and ways of thinking. Collected here are four lectures he gave between 1926 and 1929. The lectures are significant not only for what they reveal about Chinese tradition and culture, but also for their reflections of the scholarly and cultural milieu prevalent in Germany during that time. Bollingen Series XIX: 2 $9.75

Magic and Exorcism in Modern Japan

Winston Davis. This is a study of Sukyo Mahikari (True-Light Supra-Religious Organization), an exorcistic sect in Japan, whose teachings attribute illness and misfortune to evil spirits. By casting out these spirits, members are able to cure diseases, repair broken television sets, change the weather, and bring dead goldfish back to life. The author combines ethnographic description and theoretical analysis to trace the history, teachings, and practices of the sect and to assess its impact on the lives and attitudes of members. A Study in Society and History

Renato Rosaldo. Placing headhunting in its social, cultural, and historical contexts requires a novel sense of how to use biography, recorded history, and narrative in the analysis of small-scale, non-literate local communities. In this history of the kind of people who are not supposed to have one, the author combines historical and ethnographic methods to document the dramatic shifts that have occurred over the past century in the cultural practice of headhunting among the Ilongots of Northern Luzon. Marriage and Adoption in China

1845-1945

Arthur P. Wolf & Chieh-shan Huang. Based on a detailed analysis of Japanese household registers for an area of the Taipei Basin, this study makes two general points. One is that the choice between minor, major, and uxori-local marriage can only be understood in the context of economic options and demographic changes. The other, bringing in data from other parts of Taiwan and from the Chinese mainland, is that Chinese family organization varied sharply from region to region, to the point where forms of marriage that were nearly unknown in one region were actively preferred in another. $18.95

Mao's Legacy: Lessons for the Future?

What is the impact of Mao's ideology on China today? How much has it been modified and why? Does China offer a lesson for developing nations in Asia and elsewhere?

The answers emerge in this very readable and objective book which takes as its point of departure the analysis of urban and rural development in China from the revolution to the present.

Rhoads Murphey also relates China's economic and social achievements to India's. This comparison of two widely differing political systems leads to surprising conclusions.

A must for all concerned with China, India, and Asia – economists, planners, urbanists, and historians.

Where the physical and spiritual meet.

Sacred sex in India, China's Yin and Yang, Buddhist asceticism, Islamic marriage, the impact of psychology and women's emancipation—these are among the topics Geoffrey Parrinder explores as he describes the fascinating variety of ways in which mankind seeks to balance its physical and spiritual impulses, its biological and philosophical imperatives.

The Future of Taiwan

A Difference of Opinion

Edited with an introduction by Victor H. Li

This volume records the conversations of a politically balanced group of prominent Chinese-American scholars who met to try to come to grips with the future of Taiwan and their own destiny as reflected in it. The result is a lively and candid discussion—sometimes emotional, sometimes acerbic, and always interesting.

Population Theory in China

Edited with an introduction

by H. Yuan Tien

The compelling contemporary issue of population control is the focus of worldwide attention. Translated in this volume is the first systematic and comprehensive disclosure from the PRC since the 1950s of how China has gone about developing demographic theory and methods for the practical application of population controls.

Li Chih (1527-1602) in Contemporary Chinese Historiography

New Light on His Life and Works

Translated from Wen-wu and other sources with introduction, notes, and appendices by Hok-lam Chan
Foreword by Frederick W. Mote

"... an original and valuable contribution to our study of Chinese history. It will be especially useful in college courses on Chinese history because it constructs a sophisticated bridge between the world of late Ming Confucian scholarship and the world of political and academic struggle in the People's Republic of China of the 1970s."

A Great Leap Forward For China Studies

The People's Republic of China, 1949-1979: A Documentary Survey

All major policy-related documents produced over the first 30 years of the Chinese Communist regime have now been collected in The People's Republic of China, 1949-1979: A Documentary Survey.

This five-volume, 3,000-page typeset publication contains hundreds of official writings on ideology, politics, economics, and foreign policy in China from the War of Liberation through normalization of relations with the United States. While some of these documents were previously available individually to scholars, nothing approaching this comprehensive collection of primary sources has ever existed before.

All documents in The People's Republic of China are:

- in English (most were released in translation by official Chinese sources)
- full text, with no abridgements
- accompanied by introductory commentaries by the editor
- organized chronologically by main policy issues
- fully indexed.

Having these documents conveniently available in one structured collection constitutes a great leap forward for research on modern Chinese history and politics.

Shang Civilization

Kwang-chih Chang

From the most up-to-date archaeological and textual records available, K. C. Chang reconstructs the culture of one of the most politically powerful and artistically notable civilizations of the ancient world. Chang treats extensively such topics as the state government of the Shang dynasty; its economic, kingship, clan, and lineage systems; the social context of its art and religion; and the significance of the Shang in the ancient world and in evolutionary perspective.

"The independent origins of Chinese civilization remain a fascinating topic, and there is no better guide to the subject than Chang."

Money and Banking in Contemporary Japan

The Theoretical Setting and Its Application

Yoshio Suzuki

translated by John G. Greenwood with a foreword by James Tobin and Hugh Patrick

The translation into English of this prize-winning Japanese book is a major contribution to our understanding of Japanese financial institutions and monetary policy. Suzuki applies the theoretical framework developed by James Tobin and William Brainard to the actual circumstances of Japan and finds that the Tobin-Brainard model conforms well to the Japanese data; that is, Japan responds to income and price signals in much the same way other market-oriented economies do. $18.00

Traces of the Brush

Studies in Chinese Calligraphy

Shen C. Y. Fu in collaboration with Marilyn W. Fu, Mary G. Neill, and Mary Jane Clark

Calligraphy in China has been traditionally considered the epitome of artistic accomplishment, superior even to painting. Drawing upon ninety major examples from Western collections, this beautifully illustrated book broadens the historical and aesthetic context in which calligraphy has been viewed outside China and captures the elegance and beauty of this exquisite art form. 258 illus. Volumes III–VII are to be issued within two years.

This work comprises six volumes of text in Chinese, German translation, an index and one volume including commentary. (Approx. 600 pages each). It must be purchased as a complete set.

The publication has been prepared in collaboration with the "Mao's Writings Project", supervised by Professor Michael Y. M. Kau at Brown University, USA. A multi-volume set of Mao's writings is being translated into English at Brown University. It will be issued by M. E. Sharpe, Publisher, White Plains, New York.

Because of the power struggle going on for decades in the People's Republic, the Chinese documentation forming the basis for this edition can be found only in pamphlets with limited circulation, copies and reprints, and in a regional publications. This is the first work to present the most important material published on domestic and foreign policy, economics and culture in the People's Republic of China. The original Chinese text is unedited, translated into German and analyzed. Thus historians and sociologists alike will find this an indispensable commentary on Chinese development.

This bilingual edition includes German translations and in the unedited Chinese text, all of Mao Zedong's writings collected by the Mao Zedong research project at the Hamburg Institute of Asian Affairs.

THE PINYIN CHINESE- ENGLISH DICTIONARY

Compiled by the Beijing Foreign Languages Institute under the editorial direction of Professor Wu Jingrong

The Pinyin Chinese-English Dictionary is the first dictionary of the Chinese language as it is spoken and written today in the People's Republic. And it's the only dictionary that reflects the recent simplification of Chinese characters and the adoption of the Pinyin system for English transliteration—now officially recognized by the Chinese and United States governments and the Library of Congress.

The result of eight years work by a staff of over fifty Chinese and English language specialists, the Beijing Dictionary emphasizes modern Chinese—translated into current, idiomatic English.

Rickshaw

THE NOVEL LO-T'O HSIANG TZU

Lao She

translated by Jean M. James

"The decline and fall of a typical representative of the impoverished masses of early Republican Peking is depicted with fine psychological insight. The hero is a sturdy young rickshaw boy from the country, whose one ambition is to earn enough to buy his own rickshaw. In the end he picks up cigarette ends and earns a few coppers by carrying a banner at weddings and funerals. The old translation even contrived to give the book a happy ending, but Jean James's version skillfully conveys the true quality of this novel of struggle and ultimate corruption. . . . This is one of the most accessible and evocative works of Chinese fiction." —The Times Literary Supplement
