

Editor's Note

The Journal of Policy History and Pennsylvania State University Press are pleased to announce the inauguration of a special issue series. The first special issue will focus on "Drug Control Policy: A Historical Perspective" and will appear in Summer 1991, edited by William O. Walker. The JPH welcomes contributors to this special issue. Further inquiries concerning this issue should be directed to the editorial offices at the University of Notre Dame.

Pennsylvania State University Press has agreed to republish "Drug Control Policy: A Historical Perspective," as the first volume of a new series, "Issues on Policy History." It will appear in paperback and will be available for classroom adoption. Other themes that are planned in future JPH special issues and in the "Issues in Policy History" series include "The Refugee-Asylum Dilemma: Historical Perspectives on Policies in the European Community and North America," edited by Gilbert Loescher; "Urban Policy: The Making of a Crisis," edited by Martin Melosi; and "From Equal Opportunity to Affirmative Action: Policy Innovation and Policy Implementation," editor to be announced later.

Also with this issue JPH welcomes the addition of four new members to the editorial board: Lawrence Friedman, Law, Stanford University; David Garrow, Political Science, City University of New York; Paul Kleppner, Social Science Research Institute, Northern Illinois University; and David Vogel, Business, University of California, Berkeley. The interests of these scholars—legal history, civil rights, electoral behavior, and environmental/regulatory policy, respectively—coincide with the interests of the JPH readers and authors.

The Journal of Policy History wants to thank three founding members of the editorial board whose terms were completed this year: Martin Melosi, History, University of Houston; Arnold Meltsner, Public Policy, University of California, Berkeley; and Martin Shefter, Political Science, Cornell University. Their work in helping found this journal has been greatly appreciated.