Civil Liberties 1984

Edited by PETER WALLINGTON

1984 marks the fiftieth anniversary of the National Council for Civil Liberties, one of Britain's major campaigning bodies, and this book has been specially commissioned to mark the event. Nineteen distinguished contributors review both classic civil liberties issues such as freedom of speech, the role of the police and privacy, and such critical problems of today as freedom in the nuclear age.

Torture in the Eighties

An Amnesty International Report

This major new report presents detailed evidence from 90 countries on the torture and ill-treatment of prisoners in the 1980s – in police stations, secret detention centres, camps and military barracks, from prison cells in Iran to special psychiatric hospitals in the USSR. It sets out a global programme for the eradication of torture.

Spheres of Justice

A Defence of Pluralism and Equality

MICHAEL WALZER

'Michael Walzer is one of those rare political philosophers who thinks philosophically about contemporary issues. His book . . . bridges philosophy and social policy, and in the most engaging and fruitful way.'
Daniel Bell

Illegitimacy

A Philosophical Examination

JENNY TEICHMAN

'Undergraduates wishing to study some specific aspect of illegitimacy can make an excellent start with this volume.' Choice

Jenny Teichman's book is a new departure – a philosophical analysis of the very notion of illegitimacy, tracing its meaning and importance in the practice of different societies and in the tenets of different creeds.

COMPETITION ANNOUNCEMENT

The Metaphilosophy Prize

Metaphilosophy will award a prize of 500 American dollars to the author who submits the best essay in Computer Ethics between January 1st, 1984 and December 31st, 1984.

The prize-winning essay will be published as the lead article in the April 1985 issue of Metaphilosophy, which will be devoted entirely to Computer Ethics. Other high quality essays in Computer Ethics will be accepted for publication in the same issue.

A panel of experts in Computer Ethics will select the winners. To enter the competition, send four copies of your essay to:

Terrell Ward Bynum,
Editor, Metaphilosophy
Metaphilosophy Foundation
Box 32, Hyde Park,
NY 12538-0032
USA

Readers unfamiliar with the field of Computer Ethics should consult the January 1984 issue of Metaphilosophy. Those unfamiliar with specifications for manuscript preparation should consult any recent issue.
