

CONFERENCE ON BRITISH STUDIES PRIZE

The Conference on British Studies will award its third triennial prize of three hundred dollars in November, 1966. The prize will be given for the best book published between January 1, 1963 and December 31, 1965, by an American or Canadian scholar. It must be the author's first book. Its subject must lie either within the field of English History or Commonwealth History. The prize will be awarded by a panel of judges consisting of:

J. H. Hexter, Yale University

A. R. M. Lower, Queen's University

Sidney R. Packard, Smith College

Enquiries and recommendations should be addressed to the Chairman, Professor J. H. Hexter, Yale University, New Haven, Connecticut.

The past recipients of the prize are: Philip P. Poirier, Ohio State University, 1960; C. Warren Hollister, University of California, 1963.

Oxford University Press

The Crisis of the Aristocracy 1558-1641

By LAWRENCE STONE, Princeton University. Based on the private papers of aristocratic families, this book provides a new interpretation of the long-term social changes leading up to the English Revolution of the mid-seventeenth century. Professor Stone argues that the fundamental shift during the period covered was not the rise (or fall) of the gentry, or the rise of a capitalist bourgeoisie, but rather the relative decline in the military power, financial resources, territorial possessions, self-confidence, prestige, and authority of the aristocracy. 21 text figures. $16.80

Intellectual Origins of the English Revolution

By CHRISTOPHER HILL, Balliol College, Oxford. Expanding the 1962 Ford Lectures, Mr. Hill poses the problem of how — after centuries of rule by Kings, lords, and bishops and domination by the established church — men found the courage to revolt against Charles I, abolish bishops and the house of Lords, and execute the King in the name of his people. The author examines the intellectual forces which prepared men's minds for revolution, as expressed in science, history, and the law by Sir Francis Bacon, Sir Walter Raleigh, and Sir Edward Coke. $7.20

Ambitions and Strategies

The Struggle for the Leadership of the Liberal Party in the 1890's

By PETER D. L. STANSKY, Harvard University. The author examines the struggle for the leadership of the Liberal party during the crucial years of 1894 to 1899. He illuminates the state of politics in late Victorian England, analyzing in detail Gladstone's last days as Prime Minister; the contest for the succession between Lord Rosebery and Sir William Harcourt; Rosebery's administration; and finally the coming to power of Campbell-Bannerman. $5.60

The Age of Grey and Peel

By H. W. CARLESS DAVIS. This reprint of the 1926 Ford Lectures, out of print since 1942, remains a remarkable analysis of the parties and ideas of English politics, 1765-1846, and of intellectual, social and political movements which originated outside the parties but influenced their programs. With exhaustive detail and clear interpretive focus, Professor Davis traces the intricate connections among men, their parties and ideas, offering penetrating analyses of such political leaders as Burke, Shelburne, Pitt, Fox, Russell, Macaulay, and Grey and Peel. $5.60

The Military Organization of Norman England

By C. WARREN HOLLISTER, University of California at Santa Barbara. The author of the notable study of eleventh-century English military life, Anglo-Saxon Military Institutions, turns his attention to the effects of the Norman Conquest on English land tenure and military organization. Professor Hollister examines the controversial historical problem: was the Norman impact cataclysmic, or did the new feudal institutions evolve from Anglo-Saxon forms? He takes a moderate view on the issue, concluding that William the Conqueror introduced certain revolutionary feudal elements into England but that many older institutions persisted, serving to modify the new structures. $7.20

The Fifth-Century Invasions South of the Thames

By VERA EIVISON, Birkbeck College, University of London. Miss Eivison "assembles a mass of facts and some extremely cogent arguments on which to base a reinterpretation of the earliest Germanic invasions in this part of England, after the departure of the Roman legions . . . Miss Eivison uses the evidence of imported objects of various kinds, burial customs and particular art styles, to demonstrate convincingly the arrival in the area south of the Thames of Frankish invaders from northern Gaul in the fifth century A.D." —The Times Literary Supplement. 42 pages of illustrations. $12.00

A Medieval Oxfordshire Village: Cuxham 1240-1400

By P. D. A. HARVEY, Department of Manuscripts, British Museum. Situated 12 miles from Oxford, Cuxham is an almost perfect example of the classic midland manor. Its small size and the superb series of early records at Merton College allow a study of exceptional detail. Village records throw new light on the position of the reeve, heaping of corn measures, peasants' use of surnames, and the social dislocation following the Black Death. 5 maps. $4.80

Sir Thomas Smith

A Tudor Intellectual in Office

By MARY DEWAR. In this new biography of Sir Thomas Smith, the first to appear since John Strype's Life of 1698, Mrs. Dewar corrects and amplifies the accepted account of Smith's life and of his public career as Elizabeth's ambassador to France and First Secretary. She shows that his character and relations with Elizabeth were very different from those suggested by Strype. Smith emerges as a man of mercurial temperament, impressively learned and capable, but tactless and uncertain in his judgment of men and events. $5.60

The Dominion Partnership in Imperial Defense, 1870-1914

By DONALD C. GORDON

This book describes the growth of military and naval collaboration among the major self-governing parts of the British Empire during the decades prior to World War I. It focuses on the Empire's task of reconciling the nationalism of the growing dominions with the need for coherence among its military and naval forces.

The study begins with the withdrawal of British military forces from such colonial areas as Canada, Australia, and New Zealand. It continues through the years when, though the colonial governments were expected to preserve their domestic peace, the main burden of imperial defense rested with the Royal Navy. $7.50

The English Mind

Edited by

HUGH SYKES DAVIES

and

GEORGE WATSON

These fifteen essays, presented to Basil Willey on his retirement, comprise the first literary study of the English moralists from Bacon to Conrad.

Each contributor writes on a subject in which he feels personally involved and the results show that philosophical writings can be tested with profit by the techniques of literary criticism. There is an introductory tribute by Herbert Butterfield.

"Essays of outstanding quality." THE TIMES (London)

Reason and Authority in the Eighteenth Century

G. R. CRAGG

A study of the movements in English thought in the eighteenth century as they relate to the concepts of reason and authority.

Examining the political thinkers, Dr Cragg begins with Locke and considers Warburton, Hartley, Priestley and Godwin, leading to the reaction of Romanticism. Turning to religious thought, he considers Locke again, the deists and their critics, Hume, Wesley and the Evangelicals.

"A learned and stimulating book." INTERNATIONAL

Shakespeare's Professional Skills

NEVILL COGHILL

The author, who has had more than thirty years' experience in directing Shakespearean productions, here brings the plays from the page to the stage.

Among Shakespeare's professional skills were his techniques for telling a story in a play, his positioning of scenes, his use of soliloquy and his manipulation of audience reaction. The book analyses the playwright's use of his medium in general and contains detailed examinations of Troilus and Cressida and Othello.

"One of the best Shakespeare books of the year."

Clarendon

B. H. G. WORMALD

A reissue of the famous study which has reversed traditional ideas about Clarendon.

Mr. Wormald examines the advice tendered by the minister to Charles I before the Civil War, describes how in exile he analysed the motives of his age, predicting the Restoration, and discusses Clarendon's liberal attitude toward the problems of the church.

"A notable contribution to modern historical writing."

ROBERT BRUCE

By G. W. S. BARROW

"Lucidity is the outstanding attribute of this distinguished study of ROBERT BRUCE, whose biography is virtually identical with the history of the Scottish War of Independence. The narrative is enthralling; it is admirably documented; and the factors which conditioned men's minds, and which transformed opinion into passion and into action, are subjected continuously by Professor G. W. S. Barrow to close and astringent analysis."

— Philip Magnus in The London Observer

DR. JOHNSON'S PRINTER

The Life of William Strahan

By J. A. COCHRANE

William Strahan, King's Printer, Member of Parliament, and owner of the greatest printing house in London, was a friend of Johnson and Benjamin Franklin, as well as publisher to Gibbon, Adam Smith, Hume, and Robertson. This first full-length biography provides not only a vivid portrait of the 18th-century book trade but an engrossing account of a remarkable career. Illustrated. $6.00

THE HOSPITALS, 1800-1948

A Study in Social Administration in England and Wales

By BRIAN ABEL-SMITH

The first comprehensive account of the development of hospitals in England and Wales, this book describes the forces which ultimately led to the establishment of socialized medicine. Here is a book that should be neglected by no one concerned with the study of modern society and its development or the scope and nature of social administration. $9.00

DEVELOPMENT OF BRITISH MONETARY ORTHODOXY, 1797-1875

By FRANK WHITSON FETTER

The suspension of specie payments by the Bank of England in 1797 was followed by an extended controversy that led to the acceptance, by the 1870's, of the main features of pre-1914 orthodoxy. Mr. Fetter explains the complex interplay of forces in the controversies over theory and policy and in the decisions that were reached. $7.25

PRE-RAPHAELITISM

A Bibliocritical Study

By WILLIAM E. FREDEMAN

THE POLITICAL THOUGHT OF PIERRE D'AILLY

The Voluntarist Tradition

by Francis Oakley

An eminent nominalist theologian, d'Ailly was one of the group of ecclesiastical statesmen who engineered the termination of the Great Schism. His political thought is of particular interest because it reflects both his attempts to solve the urgent ecclesiastico-political problems of the time and the theological voluntarism characteristic of the Ockhamist school.

ENGLAND'S EARLIEST PROTESTANTS, 1520-1535

by William A. Clebsch

This book describes in detail the careers, theological ideas, writings, and reformation programs of Barnes, Frith, Tyndale, and others who defied the authorities and eventually lost their lives in an attempt to make English Christianity protestant. Together they articulated the biblical-covenantal-moral version of Christianity that permeated popular religion and became the basis of Puritanism.

UTOPIA

The Yale Edition of The Complete Works of St. Thomas More Volume 4

edited by Edward Surtz, S.J., and J. H. Hexter

No complete scholarly edition of More's masterpiece, Utopia, has appeared during the last seventy years. The present volume takes into account the advances made in Renaissance studies during the twentieth century and places the Utopia firmly within the context of its times. The definitive Latin text is based on the last edition to be corrected by More; the parallel English text is a thoroughly-revised version of the Richards translation.

Nationalization in British Politics

THE HISTORICAL BACKGROUND

E. Eldon Barry. Beginning with the earliest demand for nationalization by the Chartist-Radicalists in the 1830's, and continuing through the fulfillment of prewar promises by the third Labour government of 1945-51, this study presents the full story of one of the most important and controversial issues of British politics — an issue, moreover, that has had the most far-reaching effects upon British social and economic life. $8.50
