The Asian Bibliography Series

Under the General Editorship of
The Asian Literature Program of the Asia Society

The Asian Bibliography Series offers annotated bibliographies of the best in Asian literature that is available in English translation. Each guide provides summaries and evaluations of selected translated literature from earliest times to today, arranged by topic and by chronology, and preceded by a general introduction. An index of authors, editors, translators and titles is also included in each guide.

"The usefulness of the volumes in this series cannot be overemphasized. In any reference collection they will constitute basic reference sources for both the general reader and the specialist"
LIBRARY JOURNAL reviewing Guide to Japanese Poetry.

Guide to Japanese Poetry

J. Thomas Rimer and Robert E. Morrell. Contains annotated references to approximately 140 current publications on Japanese poetry from the primitive wake verse of a thousand years ago, through haiku to contemporary poetry. Excerpts of verse are interspersed among the citations to introduce major poets, to illustrate poetic forms and to offer comparisons of translations.

Guide to Chinese Poetry and Drama

Roger B. Bailey. The annotations in the Poetry section cover Chinese poetry from The Book of Songs, the oldest collection, to modern vernacular poems, including general anthologies and collections, individual poets and biographical and critical works. The Drama section traces the development of drama in China from the shamanistic rites to the highly literal classical Yuan plays, the Peking Opera of the mid-19th century, and the experimental Western-style plays of the early 20th century.

"These two volumes... provide the general reader with an authoritative bibliographical introduction to Chinese literature... The compilers, both obviously well qualified in their fields, have thoughtfully selected the items for inclusion... and have skillfully written descriptive evaluations of each item." CHOICE.

A SEASON OF THE EARTH

Selected Poems of Nirala

DAVID RUBIN, Translator

The work of the modern Indian poet Nirala, recognized as the finest of the new literary Hindi, is contained in this unique volume. Selected on the basis of their accessibility to the Western reader, the poems reveal a sensibility that successfully combined traditional Hindu culture and modern ideas of social reform along with the revelation of personal suffering to create a troubling and original vision.

JAPANESE LITERATURE IN CHINESE

Volume II: Poetry and Prose in Chinese by Japanese Writers of the Later Period

BURTON WATSON, Translator

This volume completes the collection—begun with Volume One on the "Early Period"—of the most interesting and important examples of the poetry and prose of Japanese writers who composed in classical Chinese. The work is not only a valuable contribution to Oriental studies but also an appealing glimpse into the interrelationships between two important Eastern civilizations.

CHINA AND THE SEARCH FOR HAPPINESS Recurring Themes in Four Thousand Years of Chinese Cultural History

Wolfgang Bauer

One of the major twentieth-century works in Sinology, this book studies in rich detail the recurring themes in some four thousand years of Chinese intellectual history that have dealt with the ways in which individuals in human society might discover the ultimate good and achieve happiness. A magnificent interpretive work on a massive scale, the book traces the development of changing concepts of utopia throughout a period which extends from the second millennium before Christ into the Cultural Revolution. $22.50

The Moral Economy of the Peasant

Rebellion and Subsistence in Southeast Asia

James C. Scott

Demonstrates that the fear of food shortages explains many otherwise puzzling technical, social, and moral arrangements in peasant society. CHINA AS A MODEL OF DEVELOPMENT

by Al Imfeld

The real Chinese revolution lies in the fact that this nation, with a population four times as large as the U.S., put agriculture before industrialization, turned inward to find identity and inspiration, and placed faith in the masses of its people rather than on social planners and savants. China's impressive accomplishments make her a point of reference for most of the one hundred other developing nations which can point to far less despite massive help from West and East. It is in this context that Imfeld quotes Maxwell's dictum that "China is more important to the world as an idea than as a place." As a consequence, this highly readable work by a priest-sociologist fills a real need.

Al Imfeld, a Roman Catholic priest, is a member of the Bethlehem Fathers, a Swiss missionary society. He is Director of the Third World Information Service in Berne and edits two monthly journals. He holds graduate degrees from the Gregorian (theology), Fordham (sociology) and Northwestern (journalism).

Japan Faces China

Political and Economic Relations in the Postwar Era

Chae-Jin Lee

Utilizing information collected from indigenous published materials and personal interviews, as well as quantitative data from trade statistics, opinion polls, election results, and voting records, Chae-Jin Lee analyzes the complex of factors that influenced Sino-Japanese relations from 1949 through 1972.

Special attention is given to the manner in which the ruling Liberal-Democratic Party and the opposing Japan Socialist Party manipulated or accommodated to a set of domestic and foreign conditions for their respective policies toward China. Although he concentrates on the functions of the two major Japanese political parties in the development of Sino-Japanese relations, Lee also discusses the Chinese Communist Party, the Japanese Communist Party, the Clean Government Party and the Democratic Socialist Party. $12.50

ASIAN Thought & Society: An International Review

Asian Thought & Society is a forum of international opinion on theoretical issues which have arisen through the impact of an entire spectrum of intellectual trends. It is especially concerned with socialist and Communist theories and related doctrines, and includes analyses of social structures and changes in Pacific and South Asian countries.

Asian Thought & Society will attempt to carry regularly at least one item on each of three sub-regions: East, South, and Southeast Asia.

Furthermore, ATS has organized a special Profile editorial board to sum up the major issues and events that take place in the intervals between issues of our journal. Although the members on the board are renown scholars having access to the first-hand research materials, they do welcome opinions from the readers. Therefore, ATS openly invites suggestions and information on the relevant issues and events in those areas it covers. The data provided, however, should not be longer than four pages; and ATS will acknowledge such information and inspiration publicly in our journal as the space permits.

The Rise of Modern China

Second Edition

IMMANUEL C. Y. HSÜ, University of California, Santa Barbara. Now in its Second Edition, this book remains the definitive work on China's transformation from a traditional empire to a modern national state. Professor Hsü has expanded and updated his discussion with new material on the Great Proletarian Cultural Revolution; the rise and fall of Lin Piao; the Tenth Party Congress in 1973 and its impact on the new power structure; the Sino-American détente and its triangular relationship with Russia; and the future of Taiwan. "By far the best general history of modern China that exists—rich in colorful and pointed detail, widely learned, based on a vast range of sources, competently written, and often quite penetrating. Indeed, it may be a long while before this book is surpassed."—Michael Gasster in Perspective

Southeast Asia

A History

LEA E. WILLIAMS, Brown University. After briefly surveying the early history of Southeast Asia, the author focuses on the modern period in a narrative centered on historical themes and currents, rather than on individuals and events. He shows that despite considerable diversity, tropical East Asia is a discrete region in which many peoples are bound by common historical experiences. "From the seven voyages made in the 1400's by Chinese fleets of junks . . . to the current scene observed at first hand and with a sophisticated appreciation of nuances by scholar-diplomat Lea Williams, this is a colorful and substantial narrative history. For students . . . it should be a godsend."—Publisher's Weekly

Woman-Work

Women and the Party in Revolutionary China

DELIA DAVIN, University of York. Xiang Jungyu, one of the leading theorists of the early Chinese Communist Party, envisaged an alliance of revolutionary women intellectuals and laboring women to fight for their own liberation and for that of all oppressed people. This book traces the history of that alliance, describing Party policy toward women up to the Civil War and the development of the Women's Federation since then. Although in the more conservative countryside economic and social equality for women has been difficult to achieve (particularly in the area of marriage and the family), the author concludes that fundamental changes have occurred; in the towns women now have considerable power at community level.

FOCUS ON ASIA...

Thought Control in Prewar Japan

By RICHARD H. MITCHELL. This first full-scale treatment of a dark chapter in Japan's recent history analyzes the special methods the Japanese developed to stamp out "unhealthy" thoughts. Balanced and dispassionate, this book is important not only to readers interested in Japan, but to anyone concerned with such crucial issues as subversion, thought control, the bureaucratic mentality, fascism, and authoritarian political systems. $10.95

Indonesian Foreign Policy and the Dilemma of Dependence

From Sukarno to Soeharto

By FRANKLIN B. WEINSTEIN. The complex interactions between domestic political factors and the shaping of foreign policy are explored in this significant new work. Mr. Weinstein probes systematically and in depth the view of the world held by Indonesia's elite and he seeks out the sources of their perceptions. At the same time, he offers an illuminating comparison between the basis of Sukarno's foreign policy and Soeharto's, showing dramatic changes and surprising continuities. This book launches a new series, Politics and International Relations of Southeast Asia, under the general editorship of George McT. Kahin. $17.50

Indonesia's Elite

Political Culture and Cultural Politics

By DONALD K. EMMERSON. Expanding on much of the background material for the book described above, this ambitious work is the first systematic study of the Indonesian elite's politically important beliefs and the personal experiences that shaped them. An unusual contribution to the study of culture and politics in the Third World, Mr. Emmerson's quantitative data is rounded out with biographical, historical, and social details drawn from hundreds of hours of interviews. $14.50

Popular Uprisings in the Philippines, 1840-1940

By DAVID R. STURTEVANT. Offering a unique and challenging approach to peasant movements, Mr. Sturtevant views rural rebellions in the Philippines from a broad historical perspective. He surveys a century of uprisings, arguing that they sprang not only from economic conditions but from profound tensions in Philippine culture. $17.50

The Evolution of the Sikh Community

Five Essays

W. H. MCLEOD, University of Otago. Beginning in the early sixteenth century as a system of interior devotion, Sikhism emerged in the eighteenth century as a clearly-defined belief laying powerful stress upon martial strength and external symbols. The author here discusses the apparent paradox of Sikh history and shows that the evolution of the community has in reality been a logical and consistent process.

The Japanese Army in North China 1937-1941

Problems of Political and Economic Control

LINCOLN LI, Monash University. This book analyzes the problems of occupation which confronted the Japanese army in North China between July 1937 (when full scale Japanese intervention took place) until the outbreak of the Pacific War in December 1941. The various economic, administrative, and military aspects of the occupation are examined and related to the extent to which these contributed to the consolidation of Japanese political control.

Letters of a Javanese Princess

RADEN ADJENG KARTINI; translated by AGNES LOUISE SYMMERS, with a Foreword by LOUIS COUPERUS and an Introduction by SARTONO KARTODIRDJO. These letters, written when the age of traditionalism was ending in Indonesia, are of great biographical and historical interest. Kartini was a forerunner in the drive for women's rights and for that reason is called "the first Feminist of the East." How she formed her ideas and succeeded in overcoming opposition are told in her very human letters, which also give a vivid picture of Javanese life and manners at the beginning of this century.

Educational Policy in Malaya 1874-1940

PHILIP LOH FOOK SENG, University of British Columbia. In the plural society which developed in the Malay States under British control, an educational system emerged which reflected the needs of its separate ethnic components. This study evaluates the role of cultural influences in the evolution of a segmented school system, focusing on the growth of education through the English schools and on the mixed motives which shaped education in the native languages on one hand and in English on the other. MARSHALL'S MISSION TO CHINA

December 1945-January 1947: The Report and Appended Documents

Introduction by — Lyman P. Van Slyke

Professor of History, Stanford University

Marshall's Mission to China is the first publication of the comprehensive report which General George C. Marshall wrote concerning his attempts to bring to a peaceful settlement the Nationalist-Communist struggle for China. Classified as "Top Secret" until 1974, this work is being published in two volumes: Volume One—The Report; Volume Two—Appended Documents.

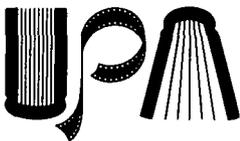

For more than a year, Marshall was in constant contact with Nationalist and Communist leaders, first as mediator in negotiations and, later, as he and his staff monitored developments in the battlefield. Marshall's lengthy portraits of Chou En-lai, Mao Tse-tung, Chiang Kai-shek, and Chang Chih-chung; his insights into the history of the China conflict; his evaluations of the weaknesses and strengths of each side; his realization of the international implications of the momentous events which he was witnessing—all of this information is now available. After three decades of secondhand reports on Marshall's mission, scholars and students can at last read Marshall's own report.

CHINA IN THE 20th CENTURY

General Editor: James Millinger, Wesleyan University

Modern Chinese history is a complex story of warring factions and contradictory political stances which were further complicated by the events of World War II. With the formal recognition of the People's Republic of China by the United Nations, the revolutionary struggle that began more than sixty years ago has become the subject of intense critical study. Focusing on the dramatic events which occurred between 1920 and 1948, including the creation of "two" Chinas, China in the 20th Century includes manifestos of the Nationalist Revolution as well as eyewitness accounts of journalists such as Agnes Smedley, Nym Wales (Helen Snow) and Harrison Forman.

AN IMPORTANT TRANSLATION OF A CLASSIC OF MODERN FICTION

A Dark Night's Passing

Anya Kōro by Shiga Naoya

Translated by Edwin McClellan

In 1910, a coterie influenced by Tolstoy, the Bible, and the Fauves founded a journal called Shirakaba. While many of this ardently individualistic group were to establish considerable reputations, one—Shiga Naoya—was to become and remain one of Japan's most revered authors.

Anya Koro was Shiga's only full-length novel, and also the work responsible for his immense reputation. A Dark Night's Passing is its first English translation and the first translation of a major work by any of the Shirakaba group.

It is a self-centered "and extraordinarily bold novel for the time and place in which it was written. For against the reality of family and the order and conventions that it represents, Shiga affirms the greater reality of his own sexuality, his own search for love, his own communion with nature and participation in myth, his own fantasies and dreams" (from the Translators's Preface).

The translator is Edwin McClellan, a distinguished scholar and professor at Yale University whose translations of Kokoro and Grass on the Wayside by Natsume Sōseki are universally esteemed.

JAPANESE POETRY

The "Uta"

by Arthur Waley

This collection of translations by the poet and scholar Arthur Waley has now been reissued in a new edition, with an introductory essay by Carmen Blacker. The poems are primarily from the Manyōshū, compiled in the eighth century, and the Kokinshū, compiled early in the tenth century. Waley's sensitive versions of the uta, first published in 1919, have not been surpassed since.

JAPANESE PATTERNS OF BEHAVIOR

by Takie Sugiyama Lebra

Professor Lebra, an anthropologist reared and educated in Japan, is well qualified to comment on Japanese behavior. Her understanding of the way the Japanese interact with others, their child-rearing practices, how they see themselves as individuals, as well as of deviant behavior, pathology, and therapy, provides a perspective unique among books on the subject.

AN AMERICAN TEACHER IN EARLY MEIJI JAPAN

by Edward Beauchamp

Extracts from the diaries and letters of William Elliot Griffis (1843-1928), who claimed to be the only Westerner to have actually lived under feudal rule in the interior of Japan, are interspersed with illuminating commentary by the author.
