

Contents

List of Figures	page viii
Acknowledgements	x
List of Abbreviations	xiii
Introduction	1
1 Access to Contraception and Family Planning Information in Ireland from the 1920s to the 1950s	21
2 Sexual Knowledge and Morality from the 1940s to the 1970s	51
3 Birth Control Practices and Attitudes to Contraception in the 1960s and 1970s	86
4 The Pill, Women's Agency and Doctor–Patient Relationships in the 1960s and 1970s	129
5 The Catholic Church, 'Sympathetic' Priests and Religious Influences on Family Planning Practices after Humanae Vitae	151
6 Family Planning Clinics and Activism in the 1970s	184
7 Feminist Campaigns for Free, Safe and Legal Contraception in the 1970s	222
8 Campaigns against Contraception in 1970s and 1980s Ireland	261
9 Family Planning after the Family Planning Act: Access to Contraception in 1980s and 1990s Ireland	293
Conclusion	322
Appendix	325
Bibliography	337
Index	356
	vii